

How alike are you and your fiends?

Salutations everyone ! I'm going to introduce my peculiar fiend Remy - the dinosaur. With a scaly green shiny skin he dazzles just like the Sun. His favourite colour is green but not at all mean, just like me. For any meal our all time favourite is pasta. There's always a stiff competition between us when it comes to food because unfortunately Remy has same taste buds like me. Sometimes the pasta disappears, the gulab jamoons aren't found and the rasagulas mysteriously go missing! Probably that is what happens when two alike foodies are great fiends. He does not stick to one place to rest because he's always zooming around. Once I even found him in my fridge filling his stomach with messy munchies.

Remy and I have a lot of things in common. For instance our reading habit. We share our reading lists and books and often end up going into our own book world full of mysterious and queer adventures.

Another striking similarity between us is our love for sketching. Everything he draws comes to life. I remember one fine morning when Remy drew a rooster. Pop! The rooster came to life. Since Remy also drew mud in his picture, the rooster made foot prints all over the floor. From that day on I was never late to school.

By now you would have realised we are alike in so many ways. Having a companion who is alike is a lot of fun because it is just like having another me. Although there can be few fights between us when it comes to food but it only makes our bond stronger.

We make a great tam which any one could dream of.
