

The coloring page was for a kid who died last year. He was the sweetest kid ever, he did absolutely everything to keep people happy and to feed the hungry. He made a cardboard robot and you would press buttons for food or toiletries, or diapers. He knew that there were people less fortunate than him and he never saw them as less. He valued them, he made sure they were a part of his community. He said "Hi!!" to everyone, and offered everyone to come over for popsicles. I made it for a coloring book, and that coloring book is going into a building that is supposed to represent him. He did many great things within his short time on this earth. It was hard having to draw wagons and wagons again and again to perfect it.