

Spring Abound: Flower shopping

Payout: 600 Words

Character: Sunny

Sunny looked up to the sky...there were almost no clouds in the sky and the sun shone down. A slight breeze brushed through her fur, and she smiled when she smelled the clear spring air. She loved spring. Ok actually...she loved every season. Winter has snow...how she loved snow. Spring ofc...all the colorful flowers and the blossoming trees. Cherry and almond blossoms being her favorites. Summer is warm and perfect to relax by the beach and then autumn and its orange leaves. All seasons are beautiful in their own way. She continued her walk through the city while enjoying the sight of the flowers and trees. Sunny was on her way to a nearby flower shop...she wanted to buy some flowers for the decoration of her and Eclipses bookstore. She always decorates it according to the month or season. For spring it's flowers. She wanted to buy some flower bulbs...tulips, preferably, to plant in the little garden on the backside of their shop. When it's sunny as today their customers love the garden, it even has some seating options for customers to sit and read books while enjoying tea, hot chocolate or fresh lemonade. Depending on what she and Eclipse have that day. After a few minutes, she reached the flower shop. Walked in and greeted the friendly shop clerk. A regular customer of their shop herself. She nodded to the shop clerk, a Gravent. "Good day^-^" "Oh! Sunny!" The shop clerk smiled. "Nice to see you. You are here for some flowers, aren't you?" The Gravent walked around the counter and to Sunny. "Yes :3 I need some for decoration and I want to plant some tulip bulbs in the garden." "I see...follow me." The Gravent walked to the backside of the shop where they store their flower bulbs. "We got lots of different types of tulips here. Choose whatever you want." "Thank you." Sunny smiled and checked the different types they had. White ones, red ones...even almost black ones. These are nice. Eclipse would love them. After a while she chooses a type of red-yellow tulip, the black tulips and violet ones. She walked back to the Gravent who was patiently waiting for her. "Awesome choice. I'm really excited to see them bloom. Also, uh..." The Gravent let out a slightly nervous smile. "You know...I read these book series. I bet you have sawn me buy the books...and uh...I wanted to know...if the next book is out yet? The last one ended with such a cliffhanger...I'm dying to know what comes next..." The Gravent looked up to her. Sunny slightly chuckled then smiled. "I was sure you would ask me that...and yes! It's out! We got some a few days ago. I can save a copy for you when I'm back at the store, if you want. We even got ones with sprayed edges." "What really?! Please! That would be awesome!" The Gravents eyes started to brighten in excitement. "And sprayed edges...woah...bet they look as awesome as always." "They really do." Sunny smiled and followed the shop clerk back to the front of the store where she decided on several colorful flower bouquets. The clerk already packed the bulbs in a cotton bag and carefully placed the flower bouquets on top of them, without damaging them of course. After Sunny paid the flowers and took the cotton bag she smiled at the shop clerk. "See you later, ok? I'll save a nice copy for you." "Yes! Thanks! I'll come as soon as I can." Then they waved each other goodbye and Sunny left the store. She walked back to her bookstore, where she put all the bouquets in flower vases and distributed them among the shop. She smiled while looking around. That is perfect. Now even the shop looked and smelled like spring.
