Evaluating Sources - The C.R.A.A.P. Test

When you search for information, you’re going to find lots of it... but is it good information? You will have to determine that for yourself, and the C.R.A.A.P. Test\(^1\) can help. The C.R.A.A.P. Test is a list of questions to help you evaluate what you find. Different criteria will be more or less important depending on your situation or need.

Key: ○ indicates criteria is for Web

Currency: The timeliness of the information.
- When was the information published or posted?
- Has the information been revised or updated?
- Does your topic require current information, or will older sources work as well?
  ○ Are the links functional and up-to-date?

Relevance: The importance of the information for your needs.
- Does the information relate to your topic or answer your question?
- Who is the intended audience?
- Is the information at an appropriate level (i.e., not too elementary or advanced)?
- Have you looked at a variety of sources before determining this is one you will use?
- Would you be comfortable citing this source in your research paper?

Authority: The source of the information.
- Who is the author/publisher/source/sponsor?
- What are the author’s credentials or organizational affiliations?
- Is the author qualified to write on the topic?
- Is there contact information, such as a publisher or email address?
  ○ Who is hosting or sponsoring the website?
  ○ Does the URL reveal anything about the author or source?
    - examples: .com (commercial), .edu (educational), .gov (U.S. government), .org (non-profit organization), .net (network)
