Professional Biography Summary

Martin Canning | Biography (161 words)<sup>1</sup>

Martin is an urbanist, obsessed with the possibility of Canadian cities; he is a sustainability enthusiast, as a result of the climate crisis and a sense of personal responsibility; and through decades of public service, he is recognized for his expertise in public sector leadership, and creativity in policy and program design.

At Evergreen Canada, he is a part of an executive leadership team charged with building better public places: places that bring diverse people together and replenish our natural environment, transforming Canada's communities toward new levels of shared well-being.

As Executive Director, Government Innovation, Martin helps develop Evergreen's next generation programs and finds the partners and investments to support them.

Prior to Evergreen, Martin was a senior advisor to the Government of Ontario on capital planning and procurement policy matters during the largest infrastructure investment in Ontario's history; and co-designed high-impact, innovative infrastructure programs across numerous strategic policy domains.

He considers Ottawa home and is a graduate of Memorial University.
