To the People of Dixie, and to my friend CryDefiance

When I first started my journey into politics in the State of Dixie, it was in an Assembly race. In that race, it was a war for the future of the state, with the Democrats on the one side, rallying behind Tripp for Governor, and on the other side, the DXGOP and CPP trying to elect then Assemblyman Whitey to the office. In the midst of that battle was the Assembly race, which I myself was involved in. It was a dangerous close race, and there is no doubt about it. However, in the middle of that clash between the three parties, there was one more factor in that race. A factor that got more than two million votes to his name. The independent CryDefiance.

He took an incredibly strong stand for his beliefs, and decided to run on his own, without any party support at all. And run he did, he had an incredibly good poll showing, one of the greatest of any independents in American history. And when he took his seat, he started his own initiatives, without asking for any parties help. He truly embodied the spirit of self-sufficiency, and I was proud to be with him, for the short time I was in the Assembly. He is a unique individual, respected by most, if not all, the people I've spoken to about him.

And now that he's running there again, and I must say, as a member and a leader of the DXGOP, I am glad to see it. He is a true statesman, and although we do not agree with each other about everything, I can say that he is someone that Dixie can trust. I would be happy to see him back in his office. That is why I am here to give him my endorsement, and wish him good fortune in the upcoming election. Good luck Cry, I'm in your corner in this fight.

Signed,
