Grandfather's Hugs

Liam's grandfather always hugged him. When his grandfather hugged him, Liam felt like he was flying. He loved his grandfather and his dad very much. When his dad was working, Liam and his grandfather hammered nails. They sanded. They painted. When they were done, they would drink cocoa together. Liam felt safe. He felt happy and loved.

One day, Liam's grandfather told him something very sad. He told Liam he had to move. "Your grandmother and I are old," he said. "We need a smaller house. We need a quiet life." Liam's stomach hurt. He didn't want his grandfather to leave. Liam didn't understand. Why was a quiet life important? Why did they need a small house? Why did they have to go so far away?

One day, Liam and his dad visited his grandfather in his new house. Liam decided he was going to hate the small house and the quiet. He decided he was going to hate his grandfather.

When they arrived at the new house, Liam forgot to hate. His grandfather picked him up in his big arms. He squeezed all the anger right out of him. They hammered nails. They sanded. They painted. When they were done, they drank cocoa together. Liam felt safe. He felt happy and loved. "I love your small house," said Liam, "I love the quiet."

His grandfather said, "I love the quiet, too, but I love you more."
