

Endangered species

Did you know that such species as the passenger pigeon, dodo, and the golden toad are known to have died out.

Experts say that up to 16000 species are under threat nowadays.

One of these species is the loggerhead sea turtle. They are in danger because of human activity.

Humans cause terrible damage to their eggs which turtles lay next to the beaches.

Beaches have become extremely popular with tourists recently.

That is why nest can be easily destroyed by people. Moreover, for newly-born turtles it's difficult to find the way to the sea because of much artificial light around.

However , some people try to protect endangered species. For example Sea turtle Protection Society of Greece or a very well-known organization WWF are doing their best to help rare species.

You also can help. Become a volunteer or simply learn information on the website to find out some other ways to help.
