Original Poetry: Mirrors

Reflecting and showing what we really are,

Standing not too close, but not too far.

Noticing our differences, as we are not perfect,

It is important to know who we are and accept it.

Nothing in life comes easy,

Altering our minds to think we are lazy.

Changing and shaping our original body,

Making us wish we could be like others and copy.

Smiles upside down with disgust,

While others with a glee, and a smile for everyone.

We should all be like that,

Taking what we have and making the best of it.

No matter the clothes or the outfit.

With a dust of happiness and a powder of confidence

We even can make ourselves better, for what comes next.

Do not be connected to a mirror as it is telling us the wrong story,

Showing us what is outside is really something to worry.

Treat it like a sun,

The more we look at it the worse it gets.

Just let it do its thing and shine brightly on who we are.
