

Cindy Baker Norton, Ed.D., is a retired educator/college professor. Currently she lives with her husband and special needs daughter on a farm in Jonesville, Virginia. Dr. Norton loves to write, read and be the chaotic coordinator/organizer for the family. She is inspired by the birth of her first grandchild, River. The series of books will be related to his adventures: fishing, hunting, building, constructing, going to school, and many other adventures.

I would be available to come to your classroom and talk about being an author, how to begin writing, and help educate today's children with skills to become excellent writers. The task of writing can be very daunting for students; therefore, I am prepared to help them overcome this intimidation and move forward with their writing skills.

I am very interested in setting up to have an author signing/book sales at any of your school functions or events (Fall Festival, Christmas Festival, Parent-Teacher Conferences, Book Fair, Read Across America Week, sporting events, etc.).
