

Analysis: Ilya Kabakov's 10 Characters

Directions: Access the website <https://www.kabakov.net/installations/2019/9/15/ten-characters>. Look through the links detailing the exhibit and as you look, fill out the graphic organizers below.

The character I most personally relate to is:
What about that character feels relatable to you?
How does this character's values, dreams, or activities complicate our understanding of the Soviet Union?

The character that would be most at home living in America is:
Why do you think that character would fit into American culture?
How does this character's values, dreams, or activities complicate our understanding of the Soviet Union?

The character that most embodies the Soviet Union is:
What about that character feels representative of the Soviet Union?
How does this character's values, dreams, or activities complicate our understanding of the Soviet Union?

The character that I would most dislike having to share a communal apartment is:
What about that character would make it difficult to share a communal apartment with them?
How does this character's values, dreams, or activities complicate our understanding of the Soviet Union?	