

Questions (from: <http://www.c3teachers.org/inquiries/>):

Was American expansion abroad justified?
Was the American Revolution avoidable?
Can disease change the world?
What did it take for women to be considered 'equal' to men in New York?
What made nonviolent protest effective during the civil rights movement?
Why does the past matter today?
Did the Constitution establish a just government?
Why do countries declare independence?
Was the French Revolution successful?
Can words lead to War?
Can we get everything we need and want?
Does it matter who freed the slaves?
Are students protected by the first amendment?
Is free trade worth the price?
Is greed good?
Is compromise always fair?
Did the American dream come true for immigrants who came to New York?
Is anything new about today's Immigration Policy debate?
Should freedom be sacrificed in the name of national security?
How should the President foster economic opportunity?
What's the real story behind the purchase of Manhattan?
Was the New Deal a good deal?
Did the French lose out in North America?
Is protest patriotic?
Why did the Pilgrim–Wampanoag friendship go so wrong?
How did sugar feed slavery?
Were the suburbs good for America?
Can peace lead to war?
Should Puerto Rico be a state?
Was it destiny to move west?
What does it mean to be equal?
Why was the U.S. on the winning side of World War II?
How do we shape our environment?
Does development mean progress?

Whose story is it?
What can we learn from the past?
How am I connected to those in the past?
How do we shape our environment?