

neylon suggested an ID

12h

Common Eastern Bumble Bee

Bombus impatiens

neylon commented

12h

Yep, delete photo 3. Different species.

offflies commented

2h

@xianzx @kyleprice1 @neylon they said it's the same bee. you can see they sat there and photographed the bee until it flew away. do you think when they blinked the bee flew away and a different bee magically appeared? some bee expert you are if you can't see that sometimes things look slightly different when light hits them different. do you think when someone puts something behind their back it's gone forever too?

invasato commented

1h

everyone... i literally took pictures of the bee until it flew away. you can see its the same flower with broken petals. you can see it fly away in the last photo. not sure what else im supposed to say. this is inaturalist, your bee reputations are not at stake.