Question 1 (E10.6.R2): Read the following tip: "If you feel overwhelmed by a large project, try the 'Swiss Cheese Method.' Poke small holes in the task by doing a 5-minute piece of work. Once you start, the fear of the task disappears." Based on the text, what can we infer will happen if a student refuses to start with small steps?

Answer: The task will likely continue to feel scary or overwhelming, and the student will probably keep procrastinating because they haven't broken the "fear barrier" of starting.

Question 2 (E10.6.R2): Context: "Drinking enough water and getting eight hours of sleep can significantly improve your concentration during long afternoon lessons." What is the logical consequence for a student who consistently sleeps only four hours a night and drinks mostly soda?

Answer: They will likely struggle to focus or stay awake during their afternoon classes and may experience a decrease in their overall academic performance.

Question 3 (E10.6.W2): Writing Task: Your friend is constantly stressed because they have no time for hobbies due to poor time management. Write a short advice letter (3 sentences) using "If I were you," and "You should."

Answer (Example): "Dear friend, if I were you, I would start using a daily planner to organize my tasks. You should prioritize your most important homework first so you can finish early. This way, you can find more time to enjoy your hobbies without feeling guilty."
