

Journal Quotes-2015

Every once in awhile, I'll take segments from your journals and share them with you to show you what the class is thinking about. Take a look at some of what your classmates have written. The only edits I make are to run some sentences together.

But like I said, next trimester is time for improvement, for not just me, but everyone.

The Rabbi and his wife would invite us over to have Shabbos dinner and lunch and my parents became fast friends with them. They also met a lot of other great people that they are still friends with today. Seeing my parents that happy and being the reason they have had this experience has brought me a lot of joy.

Every Friday and Saturday we have family style services, with fun songs that all of us know by heart. We also talk a lot about current, teen, and Jewish issues. This is why I like religion even though I don't believe in it.

Anyways, one thing about school that I am nervous about is the mosque project...

I'm going to reflect on the topic of whether or not the Redskins football team should change their name. I think they absolutely should. The name is offensive.

Veterans Day really does speak for itself through its name. However in my opinion this day has so much more meaning than that.

Coming to FCS at first was a shock because not everyone believed in the same things as me. In some of my classes I learned things that go against my beliefs.

The bright red sweater reads "OCD, Obsessive Christmas Disorder". Over two million Americans are diagnosed with OCD, and much of the population believes that this sweater makes the disorder out to be something of a joke.

So far, the mosque project seems more fun than I originally thought it would be. At first I thought that we would just draw a boring floor plan then write an essay about it, but I am finding that drawing the floor plan and researching Ottoman style mosques is actually quite enjoyable....

The tile-making part of the project seems a bit useless though. It doesn't really teach us anything,

Donald Trump hosted SNL. What has America come to? HE IS A JOKE. Donald Trump's comments and actions have shown the world how disgustingly racist, sexist, homophobic and generally disrespectful of a person he is.

Does anyone else find it ridiculous that the two politicians leading in the Presidential polls are competing in a popularity contest? In the yearbook, Donald Trump would have gotten "Class Clown" and Hillary would have gotten "Most Likely to Wish She was Class Clown". I think Hillary Clinton is a very intelligent politician, but recently on TV she's been stooping to Trump's level. There are tons of memes surrounding their behaviors in public.