

Suddenly, as the sun falls in the sky, a blue portal opens up above the island. A swarm of officers in riot gear come swarming out around Jonathan and Victor.

“Freeze! You’re under arrest for violation of interdimensional law, transporting people across dimensions without a permit, kidnapping, and coercion! You’re going to time and space jail for 6000 years!”

“Oh no,” says Jonathan, as he is slammed down on the tiki bar and handcuffs smacked around his wrists. “Please you simply must believe me officer, it was the island that did all the interdimensional crime, not me!”

“Save it for the interdimensional judge!” Shouts the interdimensional police lieutenant. Jonathan is hauled into the interdimensional police van.

“Hey, hold on, my parents know good lawyers, gimme my phone call!” Victor shouts before his head is stuffed in the portal.

The lieutenant turns to the rest of the players. “Alright, please come with us so we can take your statement and press charges.”

“Wow that sounds like a great idea,” says [a player whose identity is being redacted for their safety]. “We will definitely make sure they are brought to justice for their crimes. And nobody even had to die! After this, we can all go home!”

Everyone jumps up into the air as Castaway ends in a freeze frame of that moment, the end.

Anyways, April Fools from the only timezone that matters.

It'll be out when it's out.