

Indiana University is home to over 32,000 undergraduate students. Located in Bloomington, Indiana, IU is recognized as having one of the best college towns in the U.S. The buildings, dorms and landscape all capture the feel of an ideal traditional college campus. IU has 16 colleges and schools, plus the Honors College. The Kelley School of Business continues to be highly competitive among applicants, while the Nursing and School of Public Environmental Affairs also rank as top programs. Students who are undecided or have selected a major feel that they have the support to explore and change their major with help from academic advising services. IU has a test-optional admissions policy. The average accepted score for students who submitted the SAT was 1300 and the accepted average on the ACT was a 29.

Walking around campus, you can't help but feel a strong sense of school spirit. IU Hoosiers are big on tradition and supporting each other. Whether it be Division I teams, Greek life, student government, service, or one of the other 750 organizations on campus, IU students rally behind each other and are motivated to get involved. An IU student is serious about their academics and passionate about showing up for their team or group. A successful student is open to new ideas, meeting new groups of people and asking for help. In addition to everything that the IU campus has to offer, a bustling downtown is just steps away: restaurants, cafes, theaters and shops are all available to students. IU is an exciting place to be!