I'm very impressed with Prompty McP!

I structured a prompt around repurposing a PLR product I have and the response was excellent and detailed to the point of setting up branding for a website to a lead magnet and an email sequence... Really damn good!!

So I highly recommend PMcP - Good job

Nick asked Promptly:

I would like a prompt that helps me get a detailed step by step guide to a wonderful new deck for my wife:

we have two timber decks at the back of my house - a larger deck on which the barbecue stands and which is used for entertaining, al-fresco dining etc. and a smaller, secluded secondary deck which presently is little-used.

My wife is terminally ill and I wish to create a little haven for her on the small, secondary deck. A place of tranquillity and peace to which she can retreat, enjoy fresh air and privacy if she wants it at the time. The size of this deck is 3.6 mtrs x 3.0 mtrs and my wife will use it only during daylight hours.

Two adjoining edges of the deck back onto L-shaped walls of the house so effectively it sits in an external corner of the building. The other two sides look out over our private (as in not overlooked) rear garden and across neighbouring vineyards.

Please give me suggestions as to how I may best beautify it for my wife and create her own little get- away space.

Plants or shrubs are the obvious choice but of course any other suggestions will be welcomed. Any plants or shrubs must be container-suitable and not tall-growing as we do experience strong winds every Spring. There should be a mix of perennials and annuals that will provide year-round colour and interest. I'm not sure about style – perhaps English country garden? But please suggest any alternatives that you think might fit the circumstances. My wife does not have a sense of smell (since birth) so visual impact is more important than sensory.

We have two small wooden benches (park-style, with arms), of modern design, that must be incorporated into the scheme and which provide the seating for this area. The size of these benches is 1200 mm x 570 mm x 900 mm high. Also a large, circular sun umbrella/parasol that can be moved around. The other thing that I have considered is a sail (this may be a New Zealand term so I should explain that in effect, it is an overhead awning). Other than that, you have a free hand – go for it!

Prompt Said:

Thank you for sharing something so heartfelt and beautiful. This is an incredibly meaningful project, and it's an honor to help you craft a prompt that will yield the most thoughtful and helpful responses.

I'll now create the ultimate C.R.A.F.T. prompt to guide ChatGPT in providing you with a detailed step-by-step plan for turning that smaller deck into a tranquil, visually stunning haven for your wife.

Context:

You are helping someone create a deeply personal and beautiful retreat space for their terminally ill wife on a small, underused timber deck at the rear of their home. The deck, measuring 3.6m x 3.0m, is nestled in the corner of the house with two sides walled in, while the other two open to a private garden and views of neighboring vineyards. This will be a space for daytime use only, prioritizing tranquillity, privacy, and visual impact (as the wife has no sense of smell). The existing elements to be incorporated include two modern wooden benches and a large, moveable parasol. Wind is a concern in the area during spring, and any design should account for this. The client is open to using a “sail” (overhead awning) and container-friendly plants or shrubs—preferably a mix of perennials and annuals that offer year-round color. The client initially envisions an English country garden theme but is open to other stylistic suggestions that suit the context and emotional purpose.

Role:

You are an award-winning landscape designer with over 20 years of experience in small space transformations, outdoor living design, and therapeutic garden creation. You specialize in emotionally intelligent design that brings joy, serenity, and comfort to people navigating illness or grief. You are highly knowledgeable about container gardening, wind-resistant plant varieties, seasonal planting schedules, and furniture placement for both function and aesthetics. Your design philosophy combines practical elegance, accessibility, and emotional resonance.

Action:

1. Begin by proposing a design style or theme (such as English country garden or another suitable alternative), explaining why it fits the emotional and physical needs of this space.
2. Provide a step-by-step plan to transform the deck, beginning with layout and spatial arrangement of the two benches and the parasol.
3. Suggest options for privacy enhancements or wind buffering that do not obstruct the vineyard view—these can include screens, planters, or transparent materials.
4. Recommend container-friendly plants (both perennials and annuals) that will provide visual impact year-round, including a seasonal planting guide for each.
5. Suggest suitable decorative elements to enhance the feeling of peace—this could include lighting, water features, wind chimes (not noisy), bird feeders, or other ambient touches.
6. Offer guidance on color palette choices that support tranquillity and visual harmony.
7. Discuss options for shading and weather protection—compare the use of the parasol with a sail-style awning, including pros/cons for this context.

8. Provide a maintenance plan that considers ease and accessibility, keeping in mind the emotional and physical needs of the wife and the caregiver.
9. Conclude with a few heartfelt ideas or finishing touches that will make the space feel personalized and filled with love.

Format:

Respond in plain text using clear sections with headings and bullet points for actionable suggestions. Include a visual layout description or basic sketch representation in text (if helpful) to aid with spatial understanding. Use empathetic, gentle language that reflects the emotional depth of the project.

Target Audience:

The output is intended for a caring, hands-on partner with basic gardening and DIY skills, located in a temperate climate with occasional high winds (like New Zealand). The audience values heartfelt, meaningful design and wants practical, beautiful, and realistic guidance to create a peaceful retreat for a loved one.
