Hey Laura,

Your channel came up on my feed recently and I was particularly interested in the number of views on your recent videos.

Based on your subscriber count, you should be targeting about 8736 views per video. Hitting this number is a good indicator of a healthy, growing channel.

As such, it would be sensible to look into raising your video exposure to place your videos on as many screens as possible in order to maximise your views.

To visualise this goal, I have drafted a rough plan that aims to manipulate the algorithm to constantly show your videos to your current and potential subscribers.

In this way, any search related to photography and cameras will result in your videos popping up on their screens.

Through this YouTube SEO(Search Engine Optimization), I am confident that you will not only see a spike in views but also in subscribers.

Shoot me the time for a call where I can further elaborate on the details and discuss the value it will bring, as well as how we can tailor it specifically for your channel.

That elusive silver play button has evaded you for long enough.

The 100k mark would be within touching distance.

You have some really successful videos, with the top hitting 492k views

Let's make that number the norm.
