ALA ThinkTank Action Brief: Main Takeaways & Action Items

Personal Wellness and Self-Care

- Take Breaks Without Guilt: Use PTO, mental health days, or even short 15-minute breaks to reset. As one speaker shared: “PTO = Prepare The Others.” Taking care of yourself is also taking care of your community.
- Practice Mindfulness: Begin your day with intention, journaling, or a moment of gratitude. Simple practices like “mindful walking,” “intentional listening,” or daily affirmations can create balance.
- Set Boundaries: Know your limits and communicate them. Prioritize rest and emotional safety, especially when working with vulnerable or emotionally demanding populations.
- Find and Celebrate Library Joy: Reflect daily on what brings you joy in your library work. This keeps motivation and passion alive during difficult times.

Team and Staff Culture

- Host Staff Listening Sessions or Town Halls: Create space for honest dialogue about challenges and wellness needs. Use the feedback to inform policies and build trust.
- Create Peer Support Networks: Encourage connection through empathy circles, informal “coffee chats,” or monthly cross-team gatherings (e.g., “Bring Your Own Cup” events).
- Model Vulnerability as Leaders: Supervisors should normalize talking about wellness, sharing personal experiences, and encouraging emotional openness.

- Offer and Promote Wellness Tools: Integrate wellness supports into the workday—like mindfulness breaks, EAP referrals, and mental health trainings.

Workplace and Program Initiatives

- Embed Wellness in Programming: Offer initiatives like guided meditation, poetry clubs, journaling prompts, or pet therapy sessions for staff and patrons.
- Train Staff on Trauma-Informed Practices: Equip employees to navigate emotional challenges with both patrons and colleagues.
- Encourage Cross-Department Collaboration: Include all staff, from shelves to administrators, in wellness efforts and decision-making.
- Rebrand for Resilience: If DEI efforts face external resistance, consider rebranding (e.g., “Belonging Committee”) to continue advancing equity and inclusion.

Community-Focused and System-Level Actions

- Prioritize Safety and Emotional Support: Especially during incidents (e.g., bomb threats, challenging patron interactions), libraries must respond with compassion, clear communication, and immediate resources.
- Involve Youth in Advocacy: Engage young patrons in efforts to resist book bans and advocate for intellectual freedom.
- Share Best Practices Across Libraries: Participate in networks, webinars, and ThinkTanks to learn, adapt, and implement wellness strategies.
- Advocate for Institutional Change: Use data and stories to push for long-term commitments to emotional wellness and equity in the workplace.
