

It was quite early. Cccarpet slowly opened his eyes and shuffled out of bed. Monday... A long week lay ahead of him. He had to work until Friday. After a quick shower and two slices of toast, he headed off to work. He unlocked the door to the arcade and flipped the sign to indicate that the store was open. The arcade hall was dark. Cccarpet went into the staff room and flipped a switch. Shortly after, lights came on everywhere, and the arcade machines started playing their melodies. It wouldn't be long before the first customers arrived. Since there was still some time, Cccarpet decided to play some PacNautipod. The other employees hadn't arrived yet, as if it wouldn't bother anyone. He began playing a few rounds before his colleagues would come later. Secretly, Cccarpet wished that nothing would ever change in his life. He opened his mouth and smiled while the sun slowly rose on the horizon.