

Corotica merkka Senebelenae

Laurel scroll text

Hear me, Gods of well and water, of brewing and healing.
Hear my cry, Matrons of Horse, of Victory, and Sovereignty.
I beg fortune and fame for Corotica merkka Senebelenae,
Daughter of the Silures, Countess of the East, Scholar of renown.
Grant her clean water, ample grain, and the bounty of bees.
Let her casks overflow with the boon of the brewer.
Grant her swift spear throws and impenetrable armor
So she may stand victorious amidst the tiger's tribe.
Grant her the bright insight of awen, keenest kenning.
Let her knowledge pour forth, gracing all with her skill.

This gold-torced woman, spear-throwing stalwart,
Stands in the mead hall, in the battlefield, in the agora,
Draped in the grace of Sulis, and Sirona, and Suleviae;
Raised to great heights by Epona, and Andrasta, and Nantosuelta;
And offering succor and sustenance in the vein of Nodens and Succelos.
I call out, asking all to recognize her glory:
I name her barley charmer, wolf tamer, hearth master,
And ask she be made a Companion of the Order of the Laurel,
As befits her labors and her talents.
And wreath her thus in every form of fortune so deserved.

Done this 24th day of February in l'île do Dragon Dormant at Bardic Championships,
A.S. LVIII, By Queen Æsa feilinn and King Matthias, rightful and just Crowns of the East.
