Offering virtual and in-person services.

From imagining and preparing, to the threshold and experience of birth, to the 4th trimester and beyond, stepping into parenthood is a wild and topsy-turvy time on many levels, with moments both beautiful and challenging. It can be helpful to have someone to talk to as you pass through this transformative experience. I work with couples, with a focus on men who are in the process of becoming dads, because, as a father myself, I know we often lack the kind of support that could make a big difference in adapting to this new life. Offers individual and couples counseling. Babies welcome during sessions.

I view therapy as a collaborative process that considers clients holistically. I draw from feminist and somatic approaches, using IFS to help you reconnect with your centered-self. I believe that many challenges are related to structural violence and that we hold this trauma in our bodies.

I have specific experience working with people who have a history of complex trauma; folks in pregnancy, birth, and postpartum transitions; those experiencing intimate partner violence; queer, trans, gender non-conforming and questioning people; and individuals and relationships who are non-monogamous.

As a parent, you might be experiencing anxiety, depression, and a loss of identity. Maybe you feel a sense of loss of the 'typical' journey to motherhood. It may feel like you are completely overwhelmed due to scary thoughts like, 'I can't do this' or 'what if something happens to my baby.' Some things I may help you with include birth planning, processing birth trauma, and supporting you in finding joy and connectedness to yourself and others again. Specializing in supporting non-traditional families.

Licensed provider in Oregon & Washington.

My Women-Centered practice focuses on helping mothers, like you, to work through challenges that often leave them feeling tired, stressed, overwhelmed & worn out. I help support individuals during their most challenging times, while recognizing personal strengths and resources for additional care. Specialities include anxiety, perinatal loss, and transitions into motherhood. Additional areas of experience are depression, highly sensitive persons, healthcare professionals, other forms of grief & loss and additional life changes across the lifespan. I offer a mind-body approach to therapy that is warm, gentle and supportive with both professional and personal parenting experience. Through the years, I have worked with numerous individuals & families, providing support and striving to build a positive, open, trusting relationship while creating an atmosphere where clients feel safe and comfortable.

This is a time of great change and I'm here to support you through it. I use the idea that much of what is causing our distress is not in our control so we are making adjustments within those limits to cause more joy on the day to day. I want this to feel less like another "task" to do and more like a little bit of time for yourself to refill your cup. Specializing in perinatal loss, fertility issues, birth trauma, illness, chronic health conditions, and fathers; LGBTQ affirming; babies welcome during sessions; serving BIPOC, non-traditional families, veterans; offering gender-affirming care.

Those first few months with a newborn are so tender and sweet and can also be overwhelming, isolating and scary. Our culture places a lot of emphasis on pregnancy, prenatal care and preparing for labor/birth but falls short in equipping new parents with hard skills and a realistic idea of how challenging postpartum can be. There's this expectation that the infant and parent learn their new roles with ease, instinctively "know" what to do and that meeting your baby will be "bliss"...many parents share this is not their experience and there is no shame in that!

Therapy can help you adjust to parenthood, manage postpartum mood and physical changes, communicate about parenting values and expectations and identify needs. Let's work together to support your postpartum healing and well-being. Specializing in: working with neurodiverse parents, ADHD, anxiety, and perfectionism.

As a dual Psychiatric Nurse Practitioner and Nurse Midwife, I bring a deep understanding of perinatal care and how these lifechanging events and transitions affect families. My midwifery experience spans both low-risk settings like homebirth and freestanding birth centers, as well as faculty practice specializing in high risk pregnancy. I bring the midwifery spirit of highly personalized patient-centered care and shared decision-making to my psychiatric practice. I partner with patients to set goals for their well-being. While I specialize in management of medication during pregnancy and postpartum, I believe that medication is only one available tool and that other factors like connection, sleep, nutrition, and movement are essential for sustainable well-being. Birth Story Processing exists to support people who are looking to process sticky, disappointing, or traumatic moments from their birth. Using active listening and guided visualization, we will work together to examine the deeper narratives surrounding these moments, with the goal of moving toward peace. It is important to note that this work is not therapy, however we do believe that they go very well together. Rather, this is a targeted approach to loosening the places, moments, memories that feel stuck -- an outcome that is typically achieved within a session or two.

I am a pelvic health physical therapist that specializes in working with the perinatal and postpartum population. I provide in-home, mobile physical therapy sessions in the comfort of your own home. Treating your pelvic floor is intimate and I find that my clients see a significant difference in comfort when treated in home. My mission is to provide quality healthcare to all individuals and make this care accessible and convenient. I believe in evidence based, hands on care and developing a plan of care that is specific to you. I received my undergraduate degree in Exercise Physiology at West Virginia University and my doctorate from University of Colorado. Specializing in serving LGBTQIA+ populations.

Offering virtual and in-person support, in English and French.

I am a certified pediatric Gentle Sleep Coach. I have been serving tired families worldwide since 2014. I believe that sleep can look different for different families, and no single solution fits everyone. I help families with children 0-10 years old achieve their specific sleep goals, using tools and strategies that fit their unique situation, their child and their parenting style. My approach is gentle, breastfeeding-friendly, attachment-friendly and developmentally appropriate.

I support families in many ways: 1-on-1 sleep consultations, live online group classes, online course, group membership. You can schedule a free sleep assessment call from the website or reach out with any questions.
