Synopsis:

In a world where there are secret mages who perform as magicians, who will also perform heists and magic contests against one another, a regular magician's stage performance is so good that they are thought to be a magician themselves. They are brought onto a performance by real mages. Only after being transported through dimensions to the secret magical world do they realize that these are real mages. The only problem is that no human is allowed to know this information and now the magician is forced to pretend to have real powers and keep pace with literal mages in order to keep from being found out.
