Worldwide Opportunities on Organic Farms (WWOOF)	Volunteer opportunities in organic farms all over the world, promoting ecological farming and sustainability practices
Points of Light	Massive list of virtual volunteering opportunities
Amnesty Decoders	Operated by Amnesty International, this network of digital volunteers helps conduct research into global human rights violations.

	Volunteers have used their phones and computers to verify the location of oil spills, find evidence of drone strikes, and flag abusive tweets to women politicians in India.
Catchfire	This volunteer search tool is exclusively for online volunteer projects. Each one has a timeline that can range anywhere from an hour to a few weeks. So whether you have an afternoon or several, you can help not for profit with tasks like writing thank you letters or editing photos.
Smithsonian Digital Volunteers	The Smithsonian Institution is the world's largest museum, education, and research complex, but even they could use a little help sometimes. Help make their collections more accessible by volunteering online to transcribe historical documents or edit Wikipedia articles related to their artifacts and research.
TedX Translator Volunteers	Subtitle and translate TED Talks to bring ideas to others.
Zooniverse	Zooniverse is a platform for people -powered research that literally wouldn't be possible (or practical) without the help of online volunteers. Spend as much or as little time as you'd like identifying endangered animals, classifying galaxy systems, or transcribing Shakespearean manuscripts.
Translator without borders	For those fluent in more than one language, check out this nonprofit that combines language skills with humanitarian aid. Volunteers provide translations (10 million words a year!) to international organizations that focus on crisis relief, health and education.
