

Trakehner

Due to its Thoroughbred and Arabian ancestry, the Trakehner has a rectangular build, with a long sloping shoulder, powerful hindquarters, and a well-set neck. It is known for its 'floating trot', with excellent impulsion and suspension. It is considered to be the lightest and most refined of the warmblood breeds and in some cases the most spirited. The Trakehner stands between 15.2 and 17 hands high and can be almost any color, although solid-colored Trakehners form the vast majority.
