Summary: Listener has had a very bad day at her job. From the copy machine breaking down to being yelled at by angry customers. She comes home very exhausted and on the verge of tears. Oliver, Listener's boyfriend, sees her worn out and does his best to comfort her. He reminds her that she is someone who is hardworking, kind, and to not let today's events tear her down.

Speaker's Character: Oliver

(Key jingling sounds, door to home opening and closing)

Oliver: (Back turned to Listener, pouring some liquid into cups sounds) Hey Sweetie. Glad you made it home. I heard that there was a bad accident on the highway. I just finished making some orange juice that I wanted you to try. (Turns around to face Listener, very concerned) Love...what happened? You look exhausted. Your eyes show some sadness too.

(Listener responds, begins to snuffle and cry)

Oliver: (Growing concern) Oh Darling...I hate to see you cry like that. Let me dry those tears for you. (Wipes Listener's cheeks) Let's take some deep breaths and then you can tell me all about your day okay?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Okay. Breathe in (Taking a deep breath in, pause for a few seconds) and breathe out (Breathe out, pause for a few more seconds).

(Listener responds, does as Oliver does)

Oliver: One more time. Deep breath in (Taking a deep breath in, pause for a few seconds) and deep breath out (Deep breathe out, pause for a few more seconds).

(Listener responds, does as Oliver does again)

Oliver: That's my girl. Now, tell me what happened today.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: The copy machine at work decided to break down huh?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Mmm...I see. The copy machine was needed for a lot of your work today. Was someone able to call a technician to take a look at the machine?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Okay. Well, at least your coworker was able to get a hold of someone. When did they make it in to fix the machine?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Shocked) What?! It took 4 hours for someone to come in and fix the machine?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Disappointed) Ah. It is too bad that they couldn't fix the machine. Will they be getting a new one soon?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Did they say how long it will take for the new machine to come in?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Shocked) Seriously?! It'll take two weeks for the machine to come in?!
(Disappointed) Darn. It just sounds like your office has to rely heavily on it. What will all of you be doing then?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Well, at least you can still email information over to the other companies. I guess most of them usually prefer paper copies though huh?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: They don't have much of a choice though since your copy machine doesn't work and it was the only one you have. Your office is pretty small in size so it's not like there's much room for another machine anyway.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Hopefully these two weeks will go fast so that the machine can come in.
(Concerned) I still feel a lot of tension from you. What else happened at work today Love?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Shocked) The phones went down too?! (A little relieved) Good thing your coworker called when they did for that tech since the phones went down after that.
(Disappointed) Technology sounded like it didn't want to work very well today.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Did you have a lot of phone calls to make?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Sighing) That is tough. You said they only went down for a couple of hours. At least they weren't down for the whole day. Were you and everyone able to get most of the calls done?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Well, good. It's hard that all of you just barely made all the calls needed today, but at least they're all done now.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Showing concern again) I still feel that more happened to you at work today Love. Your eyes tell me so and your shoulders are tense. Go sit down on the couch and I'll bring over the orange juice. Then, you can tell me what else happened okay Sweetheart?

(Listener responds)

(Oliver goes into the kitchen and picks up the cups. Comes back to where Listener is)

Oliver: (Hands a cup to Listener) Here you go Darling. Want to try this first before you tell me what else happened today?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Chuckles) Alright. Go ahead and try it.

(Listener responds, sips the orange juice)

Oliver: What do you think?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Smiling) I'm glad you think it's good. (Sips on the orange juice) Mmm...I think I did pretty well if I do say so myself. (Teasing) They don't call me the master chef in the kitchen for nothing. I can make-

(Listener interrupts, smiling, lightly hitting Oliver)

Oliver: (Laughs) Okay, okay. I'll stop. I just wanted to see you smile. (Getting serious) I love you so much and I want to see you smiling as much as possible. Go ahead and tell me what else happened today Sweetheart.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Sighs) Those people should not be yelling at you for the broken copy machine or the phones. (Very concerned when looking into Listener's eyes) Oh Darling, may I hold you in my arms?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Okay, let's set these cups down first.

(Listener and Oliver set cups down on a nearby table)

Oliver: (Wraps arms around Listener) Mmm...Feel my strong arms around you and rest up against my chest.

(Listener responds, does as Oliver says)

Oliver: Sweetie. (Places a gentle kiss on Listener's head) Those people had no right to yell at you the way they did. You can't help it when technology doesn't want to work. I know you did your best in dealing with their angry words.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: Yeah, I know you always do your best. May I run my fingers through your hair?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Smiling) Thank you. (Begins running his fingers through Listener's hair) Does this feel nice Love?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Chuckling) Good. Your hair is so silky and soft. (Comforting) I know people can and will say harsh words to you. You need to remember though that you're better than what they say to you. Take their anger with a grain of salt. You're wonderful, kind, amazing, and very hardworking.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Sighs) It takes time to get to that point of not letting people's words of anger get to you. (Comforting) I know you can do it. You have made it through plenty of other hard days and that shows strength. You can always take everything one step at a time.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Comforting) Love, don't doubt yourself. I know you can do this. You can put your mind to something and work hard at it. I know it's not easy to wire your thinking to be more positive about yourself or situations, but you can do it. I believe in you and I know you'll succeed.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Continued comfort) You are more than what you believe you are. I know you are. You're a worthwhile person. You are the most wonderful girlfriend that any boyfriend could ever ask for. If I have to keep reminding you of that, I will. You're never alone. You always have me by your side.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: You know what else? You do so well with comforting me on my hard days. I want to comfort you for your hard days too. It's only fair to reciprocate after all. You always get so goofy when you comfort me. Your silly expressions never fail to make me laugh. (Chuckling) You're so cute!

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Smiling) I'm glad you're feeling much better now Sweetheart. (Places a gentle kiss to Listener's forehead) I love you Darling. Would you like to watch a show and we can order in your favorite food?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Laughing) Well, I mean I am a master chef. I can cook if you would prefer that. I was just enjoying holding you like this and didn't want to get up.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Laughing again) I'm not lazy! I just enjoy holding you close! (Teasing) What? You don't like me holding you this way or stroking your hair anymore? Am I so disgusting that you can't handle my presence?

(Listener responds, laughing, lightly hitting Oliver)

Oliver: (Hard laughter) Hey! I can't help teasing you!

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Chuckling) Yeah, I like to be dramatic sometimes. What can I say? (Happy sigh) Like I said, I can cook for you if you want or we can order in. What would you like?

(Listener responds, says let's order in)

Oliver: (Smiling) Alright. We'll order in. Now, what show should we watch?

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Chuckling) Romantic television and your favorite food it is then. (Smiling) Sounds wonderful.

(Listener responds)

Oliver: (Smiling) You don't have to thank me Darling. It's my job as your boyfriend to get you smiling and in a good mood again. (Gentle kissing sounds) I love you Sweetheart.

The End
