Strikes

There is expected to be severe disruption on the Tube, with little to no service expected on Tuesday 12th November. Any services that run are expected to start late and finish early. Some DLR, London Overground and Elizabeth line services may not stop at certain stations with Tube lines. This is due to possible station closures.

There are no strikes planned on other TfL services during this period. It is advised that you allow extra time for your journey as other services will be extremely busy.
