Aja Brooks No, he was a speaker at one conference. Even the links I found have not proven anything, except a few questionable donations, nothing that link him substantially to Big Pharma and super food conspiracies. No, the Al Gore thing was for lack of better party nominee, before Gore got really nuts..... it was after that when Gore got on the global warming kick because he didn't get voted as President, he lobbied for global warming like a cult for a Nobel Prize, and his research still neglected the basic tenets of chemistry regarding kinetic energy and overpopulation, which are the causes, and global warming just a factor in the whole schematic. Straw poll, small poll.... no one has voted in the primary is what I meant, but respect the fact that I think Ron Paul, while smart philosophically is just like the common loon on his worst day. While I can appreciate you supporting him for civil liberties, I disagree with you that he has the best foreign policy stance, or that he is even the best nominee for President.

A World Without the Euro

Filed under: economy, EU, politics — 01varvara @ 00.00

Tags: Angela Merkel, Euro, European Central Bank, European Union, Eurozone, Nicolas Sarkozy

The EU summit scheduled for 9 December will be judgment day for the Euro Zone. Dark clouds are gathering over united Europe. After their bilateral meeting, Angela Merkel and Nicolas Sarkozy called for “structural changes” in the Euro Zone and a new treaty... the contents of which remain a mystery. A little earlier Italian Prime Minister Mario Monti acknowledged that his country would follow in the wake of Greece without a package of anti-crisis measures. Meanwhile, experts are debating what the world will look like after the Euro.

H-Hour for the Euro

The Euro Zone's debt problems have become a Gordian knot that EU officials are unable to disentangle. EU leaders prefer simply to cut it. Apparently, at the 9 December summit in Brussels, they'll agree that the majority of EU members would switch back to their national currencies before the New Year. Only Germany, France, Belgium, and the Netherlands will keep the Euro for a transitional period that will tentatively last for three years. The timing of this fateful decision was well thought out... economic and political life in Europe slows to a crawl around Christmas and the New Year. This lull's the best time for switching back to old currencies and fixing their exchange rates. Panic wasn't avoided... the leaks after the Merkel-Sarkozy meeting on 5 December caused explosions on stock and currency markets. If the panic continues, the Old World's economy will grind to a halt.

The Euro We Lost

To stop the Euro's slump and the dollar's growth, trade on currency markets is being suspended and the main exchanges in America, Europe, and Asia are being shut down. The holders of Euros and Euro-denominated securities are doing all they can to get rid of their dangerous assets. The rates of national currencies and the future of the Euro in the countries that will keep it remain unknown. The panic may result in a run on banks in the Euro Zone, causing the banking system to collapse. According to leaks in the Western media, Euro Zone authorities are prepared to freeze all accounts until January 2012.

Experts are all but convinced that Christmas in Europe will be marked by massive riots and protests. However, this isn't the only problem, or even the main one. Some companies have signed deals in Euros and it is unclear what they should do now, especially if these deals are slated for next year. Many experts are surprised that EU officials are in such a rush. Converting deals to national currencies will require a great deal of time and money. Nevertheless, there's no money, and it'll take several years to fix currency rates. The economy simply won't function throughout this period unless a reliable currency appears. The only candidate is the US Dollar. Only the US Federal Reserve will be able to stop this emerging economic collapse by selling huge amounts of dollars.

The Euro That Wasn't Needed

What was described above is not reality, but one of the possible scenarios. This dystopian vision was meant to show how seriously sick Europe is. At the same time, this scenario may still come to pass. Neither officials nor experts are unanimous on what to do with the knot of European problems. Should they disentangle or cut it? Which is the lesser disaster... abolishing the Euro or keeping it? Some experts believe that the losses from abolishing the Euro will be modest, all the more so since the introduction of the common currency hasn't been very beneficial for the Euro Zone economies.

Igor Nikolayev, FBK strategic analysis director, said, "Our analysis of macroeconomic indicators shows that the introduction of the euro hasn't produced any gains. No tangible increase or decrease in the GDP or industrial production has been registered. What is there to regret then?" Some economists think that the introduction of the euro couldn't have produced any gains because its main economic goal was to redistribute financial flows in favour of French and German banks and enhance the market positions of German exporters. Boris Kagarlitsky, director of the Institute of Globalisation and Social Movements (IGSO), explained, "Europe's deindustrialisation took place not under Chinese pressure, but due to the concentration of almost all industrial production in Germany. Less effective industrial zones proved unable not only to compete with it, but even to modernise themselves for future competition". He believed that a systemic economic overhaul requires domestic currency and monetary systems and room for flexibility in how countries manage their budgets. Having a common currency makes this impossible.

The Euro that was Imposed on Some Countries

Peripheral EU countries like Greece have found themselves in a trap. An expensive currency (the Euro) is making it hard for them to compete with the developing economies of China and India. Nor can they compete with Germany because of the gap in industrial potential. Kagarlitsky's convinced that a "smooth transition" from the Euro to national currencies would benefit all problematic Euro Zone countries. Abolishing the Euro would cause difficulties in the financial systems of Germany and France and slow down their economic growth, but revive other economies that have no opportunities to grow inside the Euro Zone. However, all experts polled by RIA-Novosti agree that a "smooth transition" is absolutely impossible.

First, the countries concerned would have to destroy the economic contacts they amassed over the past 15 years... numerous Euro-denominated debt obligations, shares of European companies, and contracts. Yuri Danilov, director of the Stock Market Development Centre, believed, "The European countries will be simply unable to deal with the Euro-denominated arrangements they have made over almost 15 years". Abolishing the common currency may aggravate Euro Zone debts. Vladislav Inozemtsev, director of the Centre of Post-Industrial Studies, explained, "The collapse of the Euro would cause extreme mistrust in all European currencies and make it much more difficult to sell any debt securities. European companies would find it harder to borrow money". Mistrust of sovereign European currencies would paralyse the economies of the countries concerned or compel them to look for a currency replacement, for instance, the US Dollar. Nikolayev from FBK thought that the global economy's teetering on the brink of crisis and that abolishing the Euro would inevitably push the world into a new abyss.

The Euro that's still Needed

Danilov attributes talk of the Euro's early death to the imprecise interpretation of the term "the disintegration of the Euro Zone". He explained, "The EU interprets 'the disintegration of the Euro Zone' as the withdrawal of one, two, or, at worst, four countries. These scenarios don't involve the Euro's disappearance as currency". If the Euro Zone splits and the currencies of its "outcasts" are inevitably devalued, their industries may receive certain competitive advantages. At the same time, their budget problems would worsen and the threat of social and political destabilisation will become more pronounced. The Euro will shoot up, which, Inozemtsev maintained, would reduce the competitiveness of the countries operating with it.

Many experts maintain that the Euro Zone countries can avoid economic disaster only through collective action. Inozemtsev offered the following way out, "The only solution is for the European Central Bank to purchase securities from Greece, Italy, Ireland, and Portugal, which must be cleared in the next three years. This would cost 1.2 to 1.3 trillion Euros (50 to 54.2 trillion Roubles. 1.6 to 1.75 trillion USD. 1.03 to 1.11 trillion UK Pounds). If the ECB prints banknotes to redeem these securities, all the problems of European banks would be resolved and the mechanism of inflation put into action". Inflation's inevitable... it would stir up the European economy and devalue debt securities to the point that governments will find it very easy to pay them off at their nominal cost in about a decade. However, experts acknowledged that if the economic problems of the south go unresolved, the crisis is bound to make another round...

Under state law, presidential candidates need to file 500 signatures from each of the state's nine congressional districts. Indiana election officials say that in St. Joseph County, the Obama campaign qualified with 534 signatures; Clinton's camp had 704. The certified signatures were never challenged.

Lawmakers Blast Administration For Calling Fort Hood Massacre 'Workplace Violence'

Sen. Susan Collins on Wednesday blasted the Defense Department for classifying the Fort Hood massacre as workplace violence and suggested political correctness is being placed above the security of the nation's Armed Forces at home.

During a joint session of the Senate and House Homeland Security Committee on Wednesday, the Maine Republican referenced a letter from the Defense Department depicting the Fort Hood shootings as workplace violence. She criticized the Obama administration for failing to identify the threat as radical Islam.

- April 9, 2010: FILE - This file photo provided by the Bell County Sheriff's Department shows U.S. Major Nidal Hasan at the Bell County Jail in Belton, Texas. Hasan was charged in the Fort Hood shooting rampage.

Thirteen people were killed and dozens more wounded at Fort Hood in 2009, and the number of alleged plots targeting the military has grown significantly since then. Lawmakers said there have been 33 plots against the U.S. military since Sept. 11, 2001, and 70 percent of those threats have been since mid-2009. Major Nidal Hasan, a former Army psychiatrist, who is being held for the attacks, allegedly was inspired by radical U.S.-born cleric Anwar al-Awlaki, who was killed in a U.S. drone strike in Yemen in late September. The two men exchanged as many as 20 emails, according to U.S. officials, and Awlaki declared Hasan a hero.

The chairman of the Senate Homeland Security Committee, Connecticut independent Sen. Joe Lieberman, said the military has become a "direct target of violent Islamist extremism" within the United States.

"The stark reality is that the American service member is increasingly in the terrorists' scope and not just overseas in a traditional war setting," Lieberman told Fox News before the start of Wednesday's hearing.

In June, two men allegedly plotted to attack a Seattle, Wash., military installation using guns and grenades. In July, Army Pvt. Naser Abdo was accused of planning a second attack on Fort Hood. And in November, New York police arrested Jose Pimentel, who allegedly sought to kill service members returning from Iraq and Afghanistan.

Both Pimentel and Abdo also allegedly drew inspiration from al-Awlaki and the online jihadist magazine Inspire, which includes a spread on how to "Make a Bomb in the Kitchen of Your Mom."

Rep. Peter King of New York, the Republican chairman of the House Homeland Security Committee, said military service members are "symbols of America's power, symbols of America's might."

"And if they (military personnel) can be killed, then that is a great propaganda victory for al Qaeda," King told Fox News.

King said there is also evidence that extremists have joined the services.

"There is a serious threat within the military from people who have enlisted who are radical jihadists," King said. "The Defense Department is very concerned about them. They feel they're a threat to the military both for what they can do within the military itself and also because of the weapons skills they acquire while they're in the military."

The witnesses testifying before the joint session include Paul N. Stockton, assistant secretary of defense for homeland defense; Jim Stuteville, U.S. Army senior adviser for counterintelligence operations and liaison to the FBI; Lt. Col. Reid L. Sawyer, director of the Combating Terrorism Center at West Point, and Darius Long, whose son, Army Pvt. William Andrew Long, was shot and killed at an Arkansas military recruitment center in 2009.

A second private was also injured in the Arkansas attack. Both victims had just finished basic training and had not been deployed. They were outside the Arkansas recruitment center when the shooter opened fire from a passing truck. The shooter, Carlos Bledsoe, pleaded guilty to the crime earlier this year.

In a letter to the court, Bledsoe said he carried out the attack on behalf of al Qaeda in Yemen -- the group that was behind the last two major plots targeting the U.S. airline industry.

"My faith in government is diminished. It invents euphemisms ... Little Rock is a drive by and Fort Hood is just workplace violence. The truth is denied," Long testified.

King said the web is the driver of the new digital jihad.

"It enables people -- rather than having to travel to Afghanistan to learn about jihad or to be trained, they can do it right over the Internet," he said. "And this is a growing role."

And while Awlaki and his colleague Samir Khan, who was behind the magazine Inspire, were killed in a CIA-led operation in September, King warned against overconfidence that al Qaeda in Yemen was done.

"This is a definite short-term victory for us. There's no doubt they are going to regroup, that there will be others who will be providing Internet data, inspiration to jihadists in this country, instructions on how to make bombs," he said.

While King was heavily criticized, in some quarters, for launching his hearings 10 months ago on homegrown terrorism, the congressman said the joint session shows the threat is legitimate, and recognized as such by other members of Congress.

"To me it's a validation of what I've been trying to do all year," King emphasized. "There's a definite threat from Islamic radicalization in various parts of our society, including within the military, and we can't allow political correctness to keep us from exposing this threat for what it is."

Fox News chief intelligence correspondent Catherine Herridge contributed to this report.

Aja Brooks Another thing: for you to toss out the Matt. 7:1 is taking out of context the entire Bible. Do you neglect the other verses that discuss Christian accountability? Such as: New Living Translation (©2007) 1 Cor. 5:12

It isn't my responsibility to judge outsiders, but it certainly is your responsibility to judge those inside the church who are sinning. Mark 4:11 He told them, "The secret of the kingdom of God has been given to you. But to those on the outside everything is said in parables

1 Corinthians 5:3 Even though I am not physically present, I am with you in spirit. And I have already passed judgment on the one who did this, just as if I were present.

1 Corinthians 6:1 If any of you has a dispute with another, dare he take it before the ungodly for judgment instead of before the saints? TBone Taylor if you're going to try and quote Scripture to me like the devil tried to quote it to Jesus when he tempted him, at least get the verse and the context correct.

Budget Process Reform ▼

REPAIRING WASHINGTON'S BROKEN BUDGET PROCESS

A COMPREHENSIVE APPROACH TO STRENGTHEN SPENDING CONTROLS, ENHANCE ACCOUNTABILITY, AND INCREASE TRANSPARENCY IN THE FEDERAL BUDGET PROCESS

- The federal budget process is broken; Washington stumbles from budget crisis to budget crisis, with little to no oversight of how government spends hardworking taxpayers' money.
- The incentives currently favor those who seek to increase government spending, and the result is a crushing burden of debt that is hurting economic growth today and threatening economic prosperity tomorrow.
- The legislative action items detailed in this report would help lawmakers confront this crisis by:
 - Creating new tools to cut wasteful spending while strengthening caps on borrowing and spending;
 - Enhancing oversight while curbing practices that assume automatic spending increases; and
 - Increasing transparency by forcing government to account more fully for all taxpayer liabilities.

• SPENDING CONTROL

- 1. The Legally Binding Budget Act
 - Gives the budget the force of law by converting it from a concurrent to a joint resolution, which requires the President's signature. Upon a presidential veto, the joint resolution automatically reverts to a concurrent resolution.
 - Legislative text proposed by Rep. Diane Black of Tennessee

- 2. The Spending Control Act
 - Establishes binding limitations on federal spending and deficits - all enforced by a sequester of no more than 4 percent of programs - within each category if the program is growing faster than inflation.
 - Legislative text proposed by Rep. John Campbell of California
- 3. The Expedited Line-Item Veto and Rescissions Act
 - Provides for the expedited consideration by Congress of specific requests by the President to reduce discretionary spending in appropriations legislation.
 - Legislative text proposed by Chairman Paul Ryan of Wisconsin, Ranking Member Chris Van Hollen of Maryland
- ENHANCED OVERSIGHT
- 4. The Biennial Budgeting and Enhanced Oversight Act
 - Establishes a biennial budgeting cycle where Congress adopts a budget resolution in the first session of Congress (i.e., odd-numbered years) and considers authorization legislation in the second session, providing greater opportunities for review of government spending.
 - Legislative text proposed by Rep. Reid Ribble of Wisconsin
- 5. The Baseline Reform Act
 - Reforms the budget “baseline” to remove automatic inflation increases in discretionary accounts, and to require a comparison to the previous year’s spending levels.
 - Legislative text proposed by Rep. Rob Woodall of Georgia
- 6. The Government Shutdown Prevention Act
 - If Congress fails to enact appropriations bills by the beginning of the fiscal year (Oct. 1), provides automatic authority to fund programs at a slightly reduced rate from the previous year’s level.
 - Legislative text proposed by Rep. James Lankford of Oklahoma
- 7. The Review Every Dollar Act
 - Requires periodic sunset reviews and reauthorization of all federal programs to ensure the programs perform an appropriate role, and are operating effectively.
 - Requires all transfers from the general fund to the Highway Trust Fund to be offset or counted as new spending.
 - Removes all direct spending provisions from Pell Grants and moves all funding to the discretionary spending category.
 - Requires any new rule or regulation promulgated by the administration that includes new spending to be explicitly funded by Congress before such regulations take effect.
 - Provides a mechanism through which Members can devote savings from spending bills to deficit reduction.
 - Legislative text proposed by Rep. Jason Chaffetz of Utah
- FULL TRANSPARENCY
- 8. The Balancing our Obligations for the Long Term Act
 - Caps total spending over the long term to reduce the burden of government to no more than 20 percent of the economy by gradually reducing spending.
 - Requires Congress to review long-term budget trends every five years and provides a fast-track legislative process to put federal spending on a sustainable path.

- Authorizes reconciliation of long-term savings (beyond the current limit of the budget resolution's typical 10-year window, up to 75 years) in Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid.
- Requires CBO long-term estimates beyond the 10-year window. - Requires the President's budget to extend beyond the 10-year window.
- Strengthens the statutory requirement directing the President to submit legislation to save Medicare if the general fund subsidy to the program exceeds 45 percent of the program's costs.
- Requires GAO and OMB to report annually on the federal government's unfunded obligations.
- Legislative text proposed by Rep. Mick Mulvaney of South Carolina
- 9. The Budget and Accounting Transparency Act
 - Reforms the Credit Reform Act to incorporate Fair Value accounting principles.
 - Recognizes the budgetary impact of the GSEs by formally bringing the entities on-budget.
 - Brings the Postal Service on-budget.
 - Requires a CBO & OMB study on offsetting receipts/collections/revenues.
 - Requires all federal agencies make public the budgetary justification materials prepared in support of their requests for taxpayer dollars.
 - Legislative text proposed by Rep. Scott Garrett of New Jersey
- 10. The Pro-Growth Budgeting Act
 - Requires CBO to provide an assessment of the macroeconomic impact of major legislation.

Does Paul simply mean ALL questionable foreign aid? What does the dissolution of the Federal Reserve do, but cause our credit and standing in the world to collapse, because we can't just nullify or declare that misappropriation never existed; we must cut it out of the budget!!

HEALTH CARE REFORM RESIGNATION AND ENTITLEMENT REFORM

APPROPRIATION ACT OF 2012, effective 1/1/12:

https://docs.google.com/document/d/124WK9eBJ2Q_shRz2384m7ZslkV2Kr--81vECjtPVypU/edit?hl=en_US

Regarding the current reconciliation H.R. 4872, https://docs.google.com/document/d/1U318AW5XYBjzgEhPvvcW59RUHdSehnOVdGi-quZyxj6Q/edit?hl=en_US current health care reform could not be passed as reconciled, nor upheld, or implemented as written, and was declared dead legislation: <http://chiefbrooks.blogspot.com/>

When using the budgetary process of reconciliation, as President, one must have a Senate approved budget. The Senate has been controlled by Democrats since 2006, the debt ceiling has been raised twice since then, and no reconciliation tool can be used when the federal government is operating on a continuing resolution, for the Democrats' failure to approve a budget for three years.

H.R. 4872 is dead legislation, because there is no money to enact the funded provisions in a $15 trillion dollar deficit, and for the fact that it is outside the scope of constitutional government, in first providing for the common defense.

Colin Powell argued fiercely yesterday that the Tea Party was to blame; however, the Tea Party has found enough cuts and compromised twice, (not whatsoever, as he alleges), to find cuts to continue funding the government and put defense first in priority for operations through 12-16-11.

H.R. 4872, in its summation and appropriation, did not provide anyone with health insurance; it sequestered funding for unconstitutional use of taxpayer dollars: expansion of prisons/use of psychotropic drugs and mandating tax dollars be used to mass-fund abortions.

As anyone knows: spending money on abortions and psychotropic drugs tries to fix societal problems without the proper glue: therefore, there is no money to spend on reducing premiums and managing health care costs through: wellness exams, preventative cancer screenings, and structured surgery cost differential.

Both of these provisions, abortions and prison expansions/psychotropics are misappropriation: citing the 10th Amendment, the Georgia Patients' Bill of Rights, the Commerce Clause, and moral objections to legislating morality. There is not only an effective moral argument against implementing the legislation, but a glaring lack of finance.

The power of rightful citizenship is to wield the power of the pen, rather than the sword, for the general good of all and is something President Obama does not possess:

he has exploited our legal system, has no authentic record of Hawaiian birth, as he eludes being charged with Social Security fraud and election fraud for dead people and Mickey Mouse voting for him in 2008.

While impeachment drags on, all of Obama's felonious actions negate anything he has signed into law during this term, for committing perjury: violating Oath of Office, taking in fraudulent campaign donations through convicted Chief Fundraiser Tony Rezko, (who was just sentenced to 10 years in prison), and these donations add up to too many felonies that I have not the time to mention here and various crimes against the public that have warranted the usage of such words as treason and treachery.

H.R. 4872 does not do what it was designed to do, which is, control population growth ethically and responsibly: those who are innocent children conceived face a federally-funded fully-revolving door of the carcass harvesting machine, being sold for scrap parts and stem cell research, now proven ineffective by means of adult stem cells regenerating the heart of the original genetic donor.

Like marrow, stem cells only prove compatible for organ regeneration, so abortion and stem cell research do not require massive government funding, nor do we need to imitate the abortion policies of China, when this science is proven to be limited to those endeavors.

Unethical legislation should not be funded in favor of offering government funded sterilization after the third child, as an option, instead of abortion, which desecrates a woman's temple!

In conjunction with responsible population control and finance, states were initiated through local courts to uphold these measures of entitlement reform, rather than absorb federal misappropriation:

The State Welfare and Child Support Enforcement Comprehensive Reform Act of 2011-2012

https://docs.google.com/document/d/1SVZ_6BpS3i6BWtkeY58wYhknothG6S7Ba9EjwLS2pYQ/edit?hl=en_US

We also ask that every local state department audit their records of distribution of federal funds through food stamp allotments, welfare, and health care.

Taxpayers do not have to fund human farms: in which a mother is being used as a breeder for gang activity. These are known as "den mothers", a transient residence for a man who has a child or children with the mother, as he floats from woman to woman. A den mother creates a haven or houses gang members, as the mother of a gang leader's children, or she changes gangs and permits a rival gang to live in her home. This creates a very hostile and routinely upsetting environment for children to live in on a daily basis: children are starved, beaten, and neglected for the financial supremacy goal the gang tries to achieve.

A recent welfare fraud case involved a woman who had four different names for kids, but claimed 11 on her IRS forms and various local offices to suck tons of money from the system http://topics.nytimes.com/topics/reference/timestopics/people/l/judith_leekin/index.html

Given the need to curtail gang activity, and men who propagate children for this purpose who leave the mothers to care for the children solely and stick society with their tab, it is necessary that state DFACS and IRS agents coordinate their investigations for tax fraud. Any family over the 3-child-claim rule should be flagged and monitored for extra scrutiny if they are receiving aid of any kind!!!

Resultant to these inquiries and investigations, states may enact a cut off: to prevent misappropriation and abuse of taxpayers dollars, by refusing to fund aid to families not adhering to the 3-child rule; those who are contributing to broken homes, adoption mills, and pedophile farming and grooming.

States will be assisting the IRS with reports of suspected fraud, and neglect or abuse of children to DFACS, for the violation of policies involved with distributing state aid. Agencies who do not comply will be reported to the appropriate federal authority, and that local office's funding will be reduced or eliminated.

Taxpayers don't pay for your computer, transportation, and telephone for you to sit at a desk and ignore the tasks at hand in their communities!!!

Remember: what DFACS and IRS fails to catch then becomes collateral damage on our courts and taxpayer dollars!! The system must function lawfully and ethically, or its various departments are subject to budget cuts and disbanding, like any organization.

BACKGROUND: On November 12, 2011, the eight leading Republican candidates took the stage in Spartanburg, South Carolina, for a Republican primary debate focusing on foreign policy and national security, and the overall role of the President. The purpose of this document is to provide a report card that will help Christian families evaluate the statements made by the candidates during that debate from a constitutional perspective. This report card is limited in its scope in that it only addresses issues specifically on the table during the November 12 debate. The scores are based on the actual statements made by the candidates during that debate. Candidates' comments are taken at face value and evaluated without regard to their past statements or policy records, unless the candidates or those posing the questions specifically addressed the past statements and previous policy record of the candidate. Nothing in this report card should be construed as advocacy for a specific presidential candidate.

This report card is intended to score each of the eight candidates, on the basis of their own answers, on whether or not their proposals, as stated, are in keeping with their potential duty to uphold and defend the United States Constitution.

I. Nuclear Arms

The Constitution of the United States grants both the executive branch and Congress the power to engage in foreign policy. The power to declare war is reserved solely to Congress. While the president is Commander in Chief of the armed forces, he does not have the authority to declare war or to engage in international conflicts without a declaration of war issued by Congress. Congress may raise and support armies, but no appropriation for that purpose shall be for a term longer than two years. The president also has what is sometimes referred to as the power of persuasion found under Article 2, Section 3 of the United States Constitution. In extraordinary circumstances, he may convene Congress for a special session. He may recommend that Congress consider certain measures that he judges to be necessary and expedient. The principles outlined in the Constitution favor a non-interventionist approach to foreign conflict. According to Article 1, Section 8, Congress also has the sole power "To provide for calling forth the militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions; and to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the militia....” A military intervention is only warranted when the United States is in imminent danger of harm caused by a domestic insurrection or foreign invasion. This standard requires that the United States actually suffer harm, or be in a position in which such harm is apparent and imminent. Military interventions against potential dangers are acts of aggression and are unconstitutional.

Question #1: This week, a U.N. nuclear watchdog agency provided additional credible evidence that Iran is pursuing a nuclear weapon. If you were president right now, what would you do specifically that this administration is not doing to prevent Iran from obtaining a nuclear weapon?

Businessman and Columnist Herman Cain:

Mr. Cain answered that it was important for Americans to know that the people of Iran are not the enemy, but the regime in Iran is the enemy. He said that he was opposed to the use of military force in Iran, but he would approach the issues in two ways. First he would support the opposition in Iran and second he would place economic pressure on Iran by striving for energy independence. This would also include calling on America’s allies to place economic sanctions on Iran. He also said that he would deploy America’s ballistic missile defense capable warships to that part of the world.

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: It is uncertain what type of intervention Mr. Cain would employ to support the opposition party in Iran. If the support came in the form of arm sales, sharing intelligence data, or a declaration of support in the international community, the activity could be constitutional. However, if the support came in the way of monetary aid, supplying military provisions, or troop deployment, the activity would be unconstitutional.

Former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney:

Governor Romney criticized President Barrack Obama for understanding the threat posed by Iran and doing nothing to prevent that threat. He said that the President should have publically supported the opposition when they took to the street. Second, the President should have placed crippling sanctions on Iran. Finally, Mr. Romney said the President should have made a credible threat of military action if they did not stand down on their nuclear program. Mr. Romney warned that if President Obama were elected to another term Iran will have nuclear weapons, but if he (Mr. Romney) were elected president, Iran would not have nuclear weapons.

Mr. Romney said that he would accomplish this by placing crippling sanctions on Iran, he would work with the opposition to encourage a regime change, and, if all else fails, he would take military action to prevent Iran from achieving its nuclear goals. He said that a Nuclear Iran is simply unacceptable. “I will make sure that the sanctions; diplomatic pressure, economic pressure, and support of insurgents within the country help them become dissuaded to get away from their nuclear ambition. And finally... have military presence there.”

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: The political and economic sanctions that Mr. Romney has mentioned are a constitutional exercise of the executive power. However, the former Governor fails to make a case for why the United States may engage in a preemptive war when the United States has not been harmed, and why the United States can justify allowing friends develop nuclear weapons, and forbidding enemies to develop them. Moreover, the President does not have the Constitutional authority to declare war.

Former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich:

Mr. Gingrich also criticized President Obama and said that both Mr. Cain and former Governor Romney’s answers were superior to the policy of President Obama. He said his approach would be to take out Iran’s scientists and break up their system all in a way that would be both covert and deniable. Secondly, he would coordinate with the Israelis to place pressure on Iran. Third, he said that he would use Cold War tactics like those used against the former Soviet Union, engaging in all means possible short of war to bring the regime down. Finally, Mr. Gingrich said if all else failed he would “take whatever steps necessary to break [Iran’s] capacity to have nuclear weapons.”

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: The means that Mr. Gingrich is advocating is unconstitutional and immoral. He advocates an interventionist approach based on assassinations, espionage, and lies. This is a foreign policy of murder and deceit. The United States has the capacity to keep Americans safe without engaging in such interventions.

Texas Representative Ron Paul:

Congressman Paul pointed out that the Commander in Chief is not vested with the authority to engage in or declare wars. The President of the United States is required to get a declaration of war from Congress. He pointed to the war with Iraq as an example, in which America engaged in an undeclared war in the basis of a suspicion that proved to be unfounded. After 10 years of death and destruction America is 4 trillion dollars in debt. He said if you decide it is necessary to go to war, the president must go to Congress, determine if America’s national security is threatened, get a declaration for war, fight it, win it, and get it over with.

Constitutional Grade: A

Remarks: Ron Paul explains the constitutional position that the Congress is the only body vested with the authority to declare war and that wars must be based on a threat to national security, and not a form of foreign aid and nation building.

Texas Governor Rick Perry:

Mr. Perry pointed out that one of the points that had not been raised was the fact that America has the ability to sanction the Iranian Central Bank immediately, which would shut down the nation’s economy. He said the American people needed to stand up and force the President to make that stand immediately.

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: Economic sanctions are a constitutional means of exercising foreign policy, but this also would require an act of Congress.

Former Senator Rick Santorum:

Mr. Santorum said that he had been working on Iran for a long time. He said that Iran is the biggest issue with national security that will confront the United States in the next year. He said that he had proposed giving money to the rebel forces in Iran in 2004 to support a pro-democracy movement and to place tough sanctions. He explained that despite opposition by President Bush the legislation was passed, but has since been defunded by Presidents Bush and Obama. He said that providing support for the pro-democracy movement was not enough. Mr. Santorum suggested that the United States should work with Israel to take out the nuclear capability of Iran through military force.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Funding political movements in foreign nations are not only unconstitutional forms of forging aid, they are acts of aggression, which provide foreign nations with the justification to retaliate with force against the United States. Moreover, the support of a pro-democracy movement does not even reflect the constitutional ideals since the United States Constitution guarantees a republican form of government, and not a democratic one.

Question #8: If you eliminate the Department of Energy, what do you do with the nuclear weapons?

Texas Governor Rick Perry:

Mr. Perry said there were plenty of departments within the government that could assume oversight of nuclear energy.

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: The fact that America does have numerous bureaucracies into whom the nuclear programs could be placed is in itself a problem. The Constitution calls for small, localized government, and the federal government has not been granted the authority to regulate energy throughout the states. There are other nuclear programs, such as those centered on defense that are legitimate functions of the federal government.

Question #17: U.S. forces are coming under attack daily now from the enemy crossing over the border from Pakistan. As president, as commander in chief, would you order U.S. forces into Pakistan to clear out those safe havens of the enemy?

Businessman and Columnist Herman Cain:

Mr. Cain answered that this would be a decision he would have to make with the commanders on the ground, intelligence sources, and after having discussions with the officials in Afghanistan and Pakistan. He said that for the Afghan President to say that they would side with Pakistan when American soldiers are dying over there for them was a real problem. He said it was important to tread lightly because Pakistan was one of nine nations that have nuclear weapons.

Mr. Cain criticized President Obama for committing to a troop surge, but then pulling them back prematurely. He said that victory was not clearly defined.

Constitutional Grade: C

Former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney:

Mr. Romney said that Americans needed to understand that Pakistan is not a country like other countries. He said that it was close to being a failed state. He said that the nation had four centers of power that were to be found in the intelligence agencies, the military, the political leaders, and the fundamentalists. He said to commit troops to Pakistan in this type of environment would be highly incendiary. He alleged that the Pakistani government now is comfortable using our drones to pursue the biggest threats.

Moreover, Mr. Romney said he agreed with Mr. Perry that all foreign aid needed to start at zero. He said that with the various power bases, Pakistan needs to understand that they must allow the United States to go after terrorist networks, or go after them themselves to insure they will not destabilize Afghanistan.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: A decentralized or even a destabilized government does not provide the United States with adequate grounds to interfere with a foreign government. Moreover, collecting taxes from Americans and providing foreign aid is unconstitutional.

Question #18: “National Journal” and “The Atlantic” magazine reported that, for various reasons, some related to paranoia in Pakistan about what the United States might do, they are moving operational nuclear weapons in that country, unguarded, in trucks. If you were commander in chief, and intelligence came to you that one of those nuclear weapons was lost or possibly in the hands of terrorists, how would you respond?

Former Senator Rick Santorum:

Mr. Santorum said that he would respond by working with the Pakistani government and hope that the military, and not the radical faction, were in control. He would work with the military and the secret service to help them recover those weapons. He said that he would possibly use human and non-human intelligence, and Special Forces to recover the nuclear weapon. He said that he would need more specific information to answer the question with more detail. One thing he wanted to make clear: he would not act without working with the Pakistanis in the region.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: This is not a situation that requires or permits the United States to interfere.

Former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich:

Mr. Gingrich pointed out that one of the problems is that the United States does not have reliable or independent intelligence in places like Pakistan. America is forced to rely on their allies and friends in the region, who may or may not actually be friends. “We had better overhaul everything from rules of engagement to how we run the intelligence community, because we are in a very dangerous world.”

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: Intelligence is not in and of itself unconstitutional if connected to a military, non-policing purpose. Moreover, the world has always been dangerous, but the United States has never been better equipped to protect itself from foreign attacks.

Former Utah Governor John Huntsman:

Mr. Huntsman said that General Gianni was running Pakistan, not the president of that nation. He said that he would call in a SEAL team to take charge and find the nuclear weapon. We would have no choice, Mr. Huntsman asserted.

Constitutional Grade: F

II. Foreign War

The Constitution of the United States grants both the executive and Congress the power to engage in foreign policy. The power to declare war is reserved solely to Congress. While the president is Commander in Chief of the armed forces, he does not have the authority to declare war or to engage in international conflicts without a declaration of war issued by Congress. Congress may raise and support armies, but no appropriation for that purpose shall be for a term longer than two years. According to Article 1, Section 8, Congress also has the sole power “To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions; and to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the Militia....” A war or conflict occurring without an act from Congress is unconstitutional. The Constitution provides no authority to provide foreign nations social welfare. The principles outlined in the Constitution favor a non-interventionist approach to foreign affairs.

Question #2: What’s your appraisal of the combat situation on the ground in Afghanistan today and what would you change?

Texas Governor Rick Perry:

Mr. Perry asserted that the mission in Afghanistan must be completed, but to provide timetables for withdraw is inappropriate, irresponsible, and threatens the lives of our military personnel. He said that he had been in contact with the commanders in the field in Afghanistan and he believed that progress was being made there. Mr. Perry said the primary challenge was training up the Afghan security forces to a level that they can protect the citizenry and keep the terrorist from using Afghanistan and Pakistan as a staging point for their activities.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: The war in Afghanistan is an unconstitutional war since it constitutes an undeclared act of war.

Former Senator Rick Santorum:

Mr. Santorum said that he would view a victory in Afghanistan to be accomplished if the Taliban has been disabled and they no longer pose a security threat to the United States.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: The standard that Mr. Santorum asserts is not a reasonably objective one since the tragedy of 9/11 proved that anyone with the ability to fly an airplane could pose a security threat to the United States. By this standard, a declaration of war could be made against any nation, or in this case against any group of individuals on the basis of affiliation. Ironically enough this was the same type of standard that Rome used from time to time to justify the persecution of Christians.

Congresswoman Michele Bachmann:

Mrs. Bachmann said that the 30,000-troop surge was a success, but criticized President Obama for hesitating and for sending only 30,000 troops instead of 40,000. She said the decision to withdraw troops by September 2012 was a fatal decision. She said that it would be more difficult to get our allies to work with us.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks:

Former Utah Governor John Huntsman:

Mr. Huntsman suggested that the spikes in casualties in Afghanistan were caused by a lack of security in certain parts of the country. He said that he believed that America had achieved its objective and that it was time to bring the troops home from Afghanistan. He pointed out that in 2004 Afghanistan had free elections. Since that time Al Qaeda has been dismantled, the Taliban has been uprooted and Osama Bin Laden has been killed. He said the future of the nation was not in Afghanistan or Iraq. The former Governor said that Americans must face the new challenges in economics and education that will play out in the Asia-Pacific region.

Mr. Huntsman said that he would leave a number of troops behind for nation building purposes. Enhanced Special Forces would remain in Afghanistan for the purpose of gathering intelligence and providing rapid response. He also said that he would commit to training an Afghan national army. "We are fighting an asymmetric threat, a counterterror threat. Not only there, but in Waziristan and every other corner of the world. And we need to prepare for that as a reality of our 21st Century foreign policy."

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: While he is committed to withdrawing troops, Mr. Huntsman is committed to leaving a contingent behind for nation building purposes. This is an unconstitutional use of the American military.

Question #3: Do you support a smaller footprint in Afghanistan? And secondarily, is it time or would it ever be time for the United States to negotiate with the Taliban?

Former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney:

Mr. Romney said that Afghanistan may decide how they will approach the terrorism, but it is America's policy that we do not negotiate with terrorists. Mr. Romney said the most important thing was to secure the victory of our soldiers. He pointed out that commanders in Afghanistan are saying that they may see the justification of withdrawing 30,000 to 40,000 troops during the next year. He suggested that President Obama had set the goal of withdrawing the troops by September in anticipation of the next election. He criticized the President for making the decision to pull troops out in the middle of the fighting season. The former governor said that a December withdraw with a 2014 timetable is the right decision. He said that a small contingent of support forces would remain in Afghanistan.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Mr. Romney would continue the war in Afghanistan and leave soldiers behind for nation building purposes. There is no constitutional justification for these kinds of activities.

Former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich:

Mr. Gingrich answered that he would not negotiate with terrorists. He continued by saying that the issue was deeper than anyone understood. The reason why the Taliban survive is because they have found sanctuary in Pakistan. He suggests that the Taliban would never be defeated as long as they can hide. Mr. Gingrich suggested the problem would persist unless we also expand the war into Pakistan and Iran.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Not only would Mr. Gingrich continue an unconstitutional war, he would expand the war efforts into two new fronts.

Question #4: In your judgment, is Pakistan a friend or foe?

Businessman and Columnist Herman Cain:

Mr. Cain said that it was unclear at this point whether Pakistan is a friend or foe. He pointed out that there are many questions that need to be answered and America's relationship with Pakistan needs to be re-evaluated. Mr. Cain said that, as president he would want to know what kind of commitments Pakistan is willing to make to assure the United States of America that they are friendly. Specifically, he would want to see troop commitments from the Pakistani government, and if they are willing to come to a regional agreement with the United States.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: This plan of action is predicated on the validity of nation building. If Pakistan desired to remain neutral and refused to commit troops or enter an agreement with the United States regarding the governing of their own region, it would be viewed as a threat. The United States cannot require another nation to commit troops to accomplish their own conquest of the region; nor may the United States require that Pakistan agree with the plans that the United State has for their own region. The Constitution does not allow for American Imperialism.

III. Foreign Aid

The Constitution of the United States grants both the executive branch and Congress the power to engage in foreign policy. The power to declare war is reserved solely to Congress. While the President is Commander in Chief of the armed forces, he does not have the authority to declare war or to engage in international conflicts without a declaration of war issued by Congress. Congress may raise and support armies, but no appropriation for that purpose shall be for a term longer than two years. Power over the federal budget, expenditures, and debts are vested solely in the Congress of the United States. The Constitution provides no authority to provide foreign nations with social welfare. The principles outlined in the Constitution favor a non-interventionist approach to foreign affairs.

Question #5: What is the proper role of the United States through foreign aid and other interventions?

Texas Governor Rick Perry:

Mr. Perry said that the government was not in control of Pakistan, but that the military was in control. He said that the consideration of Pakistan is part of a deeper issue of foreign aid. He said that Pakistan was sending a clear message that they did not want our foreign aid, because they are not being honest with the United States and our soldiers' lives are at risk as a result. He said that, as president, he would send a clear message to every other nation by starting at zero dollars in foreign aid. "Then we'll have a conversation in this country about whether or not a penny of our taxpayer dollars needs to go into those countries.... and it's time for us as a country to say no to foreign aid to countries that don't support the United States of America."

When later asked if his "zero aid" policy would include Israel, the Governor answer that it would. Every nation would start at zero. He said that because Israel is an ally his guess would be that we would fund them at a substantial level. He said that the same approach might be useful to determine the budget for federal agencies.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: The Constitution does not allow for taxes to be raised creating an international welfare system.

Congresswoman Michele Bachmann:

Mrs. Bachmann disagreed with Governor Perry pointing out that Pakistan has a nuclear weapon and that terrorists are closer to that nuclear bomb than they are in any other nation. While she would reduce the amount of foreign aid given to many nations, she would not pull the foreign aid from Pakistan. She said that the next president needs to understand the intricacies involved with the Middle East. She warned that there are indicators that Iran and Pakistan appear to be staging a nuclear war with Israel. She concluded by criticizing President Obama for showing his support for Occupy Wall Street, but he has yet to show his support for Israel.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: The Constitution does not allow for taxes to be raised creating an international welfare system, nor does the Constitution allow the United States to commit American troops solely on the behalf of foreign nations such as Israel.

Former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich:

The former Speaker said that what Governor Perry had said made a lot of sense. He said that before handing over billions of dollars automatically, Congress would start by starting at zero and then asking for an explanation concerning why the nation should receive any aid. He pointed to the fact that Pakistan had harbored Osama Bin Laden for at least six years and said this is a good indication that they should not receive any foreign aid.

When asked about how he would approach Egypt, Mr. Gingrich said that eliminating foreign aid for Egypt was a possibility. He said that the degree to which the Arab Spring has become anti-Christian bothers him a great deal. "I would certainly have the State Department intervening on behalf of the Coptic Christians, who are being persecuted under the new system, having their churches burned, having people killed. And I'd be pretty insistent that we are not going to be supportive of a regime, which is explicitly hostile to religions other than Islam."

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Mr. Gingrich provides a vivid example of the problem with the current foreign aid policy. Billions of dollars are spent in an unconstitutional manner to support nations who show animosity to the United States and persecute Coptic Christians.

Former Senator Rick Santorum:

Mr. Santorum said that Pakistan must be a friend of the United States because they are a nuclear power. He expressed concern that if the wrong people gained control of the country, the situation in Pakistan could become like the situation in Iran. He suggested that America must engage Pakistan as a friend and work through the current difficulties. The moderator pressed Mr. Santorum pointing out that only a few weeks ago a Pakistani backed terrorist network, the Hikani Network, laid siege to the NATO headquarters and the U.S. embassy in Kabul for 20 hours.

Mr. Santorum answered that a lot of Pakistanis and most of the government don't back the Hikani Network. He said that the United States needed to continue to send monetary aid to Pakistan. He pointed out that the aid relationship also came with military aid. Aid relationship created jobs because the money is spent in the United States for military hardware, and builds a dependency on American weapon systems.

Constitutional Grade: F

Question #6: In your judgment, do you believe Governor Romney has the ability to think outside the box and change United States' national security or foreign policy perspectives?

Former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich:

Mr. Gingrich said that he did not desire to comment on that. He said that while the candidates may make such comments on radio shows, at the debate they are all talking to the American people about why each of them is more fit for the presidency than Barack Obama. He said that Mitt Romney would be a vast improvement on the Obama administration. When asked by the moderator how he would think outside the box, Mr. Gingrich answered that he would use Cold War strategies against North Korea and Iran. He said he would also adopt a strong policy toward the United Nations. He said that he would explicitly repudiate Agenda 21. In addition, he said that he would apply Lean Six Sigma to the Pentagon to liberate money and rebuild the nation. He criticized the President for shrinking the size of the Navy to the point it is incapable of doing its job globally.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Again Mr. Gingrich calls for covert Cold War strategies that involve murder, espionage, and deceit.

Former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney:

Mr. Romney said his foreign policy was pretty straightforward. He said he would be guided by the conviction that this century must be an American century in which America has the strongest values, the strongest economy, and the strongest military. "An American century means the century where America leads the free world and the free world leads the entire world."

He criticized President Obama for thinking that America is just another nation and failing to recognize that America is an exceptional nation. He contrasted himself with the President and said that if he were president he would conduct foreign policy through strength and would do everything with the intent of making America stronger. He said that he would use whatever means necessary within the law to protect American citizens and their rights.

Constitutional Grade: B

IV. Interventionism

The Constitution of the United States grants both the executive branch and Congress the power to engage in foreign policy. The power to declare war is reserved solely to Congress. While the president is Commander in Chief of the armed forces, he does not have the authority to declare war or to engage in international conflicts without a declaration of war issued by Congress. Congress may raise and support armies, but no appropriation for that purpose shall be for a term longer than two years. The president also has what is sometimes referred to as the power of persuasion found under Article 2, Section 3 of the United States Constitution. In extraordinary circumstances, he may convene Congress for a special session. He may recommend that Congress consider certain measures that he judges to be necessary and expedient. The principles outlined in the Constitution favor a non-interventionist approach to foreign conflict. According to Article 1, Section 8, Congress also has the sole power "To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions; and to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the Militia...." A military intervention is only warranted when the United States is in imminent danger of harm caused by a domestic insurrection or foreign invasion. This standard requires that the United States actually suffer harm, or be in a position in which such harm is apparent and imminent. Military interventions against potential dangers are acts of aggression and are unconstitutional.

Questions#13: Would you describe what you think is happening in the Arab Spring? How, as president, can you make it work for the United States and not against us?

Businessman and Columnist Herman Cain:

Mr. Cain criticized the Obama administration for mishandling the revolutions in Libya, Egypt, and Yemen. He warned that the United States' relationship with Egypt might not survive. He explained that when President Obama backed the opposition it turned out that the opposition was more of the Muslim Brotherhood, which could now gain a majority in the government. He also criticized President Obama for saying that the president of Yemen had to go when he was one of our allies who helped the United State to fight al-Qaeda. "This president has been on the wrong side in nearly every situation in the Arab world, which has basically done nothing except to put that entire thing at risk."

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: Mr. Cain's criticism is warranted, but his answer is still predicated on the assumption that the United States should take sides in these issues.

Question #14: At least 3,500 civilians have been slaughtered in Syria. Today, the Arab League voted to suspend Syria. If the opposition requested military assistance, covert smuggling, or a no-fly zone, would you authorize either or both?

Former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich:

Mr. Gingrich commended the Arab League for suspending Syria. He also criticized President Obama for turning against President Mubarak who had been a faithful ally for years. This only signals to the world that the United States cannot be trusted to back our allies. He criticized the State Department for being soft on Assad, an ally of Iran. He said that if he were president he would actively take the steps necessary to end his regime, most of which would be covert. He said that a no-fly zone would not be necessary.

Constitutional Grade: F

Texas Representative Ron Paul:

Congressman Paul disagreed with Mr. Cain and Mr. Gingrich and said that intervention would be a big mistake. The United States should allow the Syrians to deal with their own country.

When pressed by the moderator about the 3,500 dead in Syria, Mr. Paul responded that the Soviets and Chinese had killed hundreds of millions in the last century, but the United States did not feel morally compelled to try to end it. He said the situation was a tragedy, but an American intervention that props up another dictator causes trouble for America. He said that America does not need to lose any more troops; it is a very costly bad idea.

Constitutional Grade: A

Former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney:

Mr. Romney said that it was time for the Assad dictatorship to end. He said he supported using covert operations such as those suggested by Mr. Gingrich. He said that he disagreed with Ron Paul because Syria was the only Arab ally of Iran and was arming Hezbollah. This provides significant access for Iran. Because of the aspirations of Iran, Mr. Romney argued, it was important to intervene and support a regime change. In the process these activities would be helpful to our allies like Saudi Arabia and Turkey.

V. Military Policy

The Constitution of the United States grants both the president and Congress the joint authority to engage in foreign policy. However, the president is not authorized to enforce treaties without the ratification of Congress. Moreover, Congress has exclusive authority to tax international trade. The power to declare war is reserved solely to Congress. While the president is Commander in Chief of the armed forces, he does not have the authority to declare war or to engage in international conflicts without a declaration of war issued by Congress. Congress may raise and support armies, but no appropriation for that purpose shall be for a term longer than two years. The Constitution provides no authority to provide foreign nations social welfare. The principles outlined in the Constitution favor a non-interventionist approach to foreign affairs

Question #7: Would you listen to your generals for their advice before making decisions as Commander in Chief? How will you know when you should overrule your generals?

Businessman and Columnist Herman Cain:

Mr. Cain answered that it was important that you surround yourself with the right people. He said that you would know you are making the right decision when you have considered all the facts and the alternatives. He said that because he will have multiple people offering different recommendations, it would provide a greater opportunity to make the right decisions. He said that while he will listen to his generals, it would be up to the Commander in Chief to make the decisions.

Constitutional Grade: A

Former Senator Rick Santorum:

Mr. Santorum said he would enter the presidency with a very clear agenda. He said that he would gather people together who share his point of view. He said that while he was in the Senate he did not hire people who did not share his point of view. He said that he was who the American people were electing, someone who is crystal clear and does not mince words. He said that he would then follow through.

When the Moderator asked about what his agenda would entail, Mr. Santorum answered that the number one issue would be to keep Iran from obtaining a nuclear weapon. He said that he would also accomplish this through covert activity. "There have been scientists turning up dead in Russia and in Iran. There have been computer viruses. There have been problems at their facility. I hope that the United States has been involved with that."

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Not only are these activities unconstitutional they are also criminal.

Texas Governor Rick Perry:

Mr. Perry pointed out that he has been Commander in the state of Texas for 10 years. He said if there was someone who had experience making decisions, it was he. He said that he had handled natural disasters, deployed troops to combat zones, and dealt with generals. He said that he would surround himself with individuals at the highest levels at the Department of Defense, both on the military side and on the civilian side. He said that from day one Americans would know that they are secure and this would include along the southern border of Mexico.

Constitutional Grade: B

Question #12: Almost half of the federal budget goes to military-related expenditures. Should we increase spending, especially in a debt crisis?

Congresswoman Michele Bachmann:

Mrs. Bachmann explained that military expenditures could be reduced especially in the area of how the military finances procurements. Weapons manufacturers are rewarded based on the length of time it takes to produce weapons. She said that American needed to move toward a fixed cost system. She also said that Tricare also needed to be reformed. The Congresswoman said that she did not want to cut benefits for the military, but that it needed to be modernized. She said that Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid also needed to be modernized. She said that Tricare, Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security would collapse under the weight of Obamacare. Mrs. Bachman said if she were elected president she would repeal Obamacare.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: While military spending should be cut, Mrs. Bachmann suggests that unconstitutional programs such as Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid should be saved.

VI. Torture

The Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States provides that no person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation. The Eighth Amendment provides that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted. The torturing of suspects is a violation of the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution since the suspects are held and forced to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime without due process. Torture is also a violation of the Eighth Amendment to the Constitution since it constitutes both a cruel and an unusual punishment. The bill of rights governs all United States courts both foreign and domestic. The only right that is waved for a military tribunal in times of war is the right to an indictment by a grand jury.

Question #9: What is your stance on torture?

Businessman and Columnist Herman Cain:

Mr. Cain answered that in keeping with the procedure of the military, he did not agree with torture, period. However, he said that he would leave it up to military leaders to determine what is torture and what is not torture. Mr. Cain said that he believed that waterboarding was an enhanced interrogation technique and that he would reinstate a policy that permits waterboarding.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: It is interesting to point out that earlier Mr. Cain had said that while he would listen to the advice of his generals, he would be making all of the decisions. However, when it comes to an issue like torture, he said he would allow the military leaders to decide. Waterboarding is an obstruction to constitutional standards of justice. The purpose for which the Constitution forbids coerced confessions is because coerced confessions are unreliable, and are a violation of life and liberty.

Congresswoman Michele Bachmann:

Mrs. Bachmann said that she would also be willing to use waterboarding, saying that she believed it was very effective in gaining information. She criticized President Obama for allowing the A.C.L.U. to run the C.I.A., and alleged that today when a terrorist is interdicted there was no jail for them. “We have nowhere to take them. We have no C.I.A. interrogations anymore. It is as though we have decided we want to lose in the War on Terror under President Obama. That’s not my strategy. My strategy will be that the United States will be victorious in the War on Terror.”

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Mrs. Bachmann’s allegations against President Obama are false. The number of “secret” military prisons has actually increased under President Obama. New prisons have opened in Afghanistan, Somalia, and on the island of Diego Garcia located in the Indian Ocean. The C.I.A. is permitted to carry out interrogations at these facilities.

Texas Representative Ron Paul:

Congressman Paul pointed out that torture is illegal under the laws of the United States, is illegal by international law, and is immoral. He said that waterboarding is torture and is very impractical as a means of gathering reliable evidence. He asked why anyone would accept the position that it was right to torture 100 people because you know one of them may have information. “I think it’s uncivilized practice, and has no practical advantages, and is really un-American to accept a principal that we will torture people that we capture.”

Constitutional Grade: A

Former Utah Governor John Huntsman:

Mr. Huntsman said that America has a “name brand” in the world and has values. He pointed out that he had lived overseas four different times and has done business overseas. He warned that America diminished its standing in the world when it failed to protect those values of liberty, democracy, human rights, and open markets, when we torture. He said that he believed waterboarding is torture and that we should not do it. “We dilute ourselves down like a whole lot of other countries. And we lose that ability to project values that a lot of people in corners of this world are still relying on the United States to stand up for them.”

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: Mr. Huntsman holds to a constitutional standard on the issue of torture, but appeals to the importance of taking the moral high ground as America engages in unconstitutional nation building around the world. Moreover, democracy was criticized and rejected as a form of government by the framers of the Constitution. The Constitution calls for and insures a republican form of government.

VII. Assassination

The Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States provides that no person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation. Moreover, the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution provides that in all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to confront the witnesses against him, have an opportunity to obtain witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense. The Eighth Amendment provides that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted. The assassination of suspects in the United States is a violation of due process. The only right that is waved for a military tribunal in times of war is the right to an indictment by a grand jury.

Moreover, as Commander in Chief of the armed forces, he does not have the authority to declare war or to engage in international conflicts without a declaration of war issued by Congress. The principles outlined in the Constitution favor a non-interventionist approach to foreign conflict. According to Article 1, Section 8, Congress also has the sole power “To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions; and to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the Militia....” A military intervention is only warranted when the United States is in imminent danger of harm caused by a domestic insurrection or foreign invasion. This standard requires that the United States actually suffer harm, or be in a position in which such harm is apparent and imminent. Military interventions against potential dangers are acts of aggression and are unconstitutional.

Question #10: President Obama recently ordered the death of an American citizen who was suspected of terrorist activity overseas. Is it appropriate for the American president, on the president’s say-so alone, to order the death of an American citizen suspected of terrorism?

Former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney:

Mr. Romney said that he absolutely agrees with the ordered deaths of American citizens who align themselves with groups who declare war on the United States. If an American takes up arms during a war against the United States he is fair game.

Constitutional Grade: F

Former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich:

Mr. Gingrich was careful to point out that the death warrant was not signed against a mere suspect, but an individual who had been found guilty of actively seeking the death of Americans. When the moderator pointed out that the individual had not been found guilty by a court of law, Mr. Gingrich retorted that he was found guilty by a panel that considered the matter and reported back to the President. Gingrich and the moderator disagreed that the individual was tried under the rule of law.

Mr. Gingrich said that if persons engage in war against the United States they are enemy combatants. They do not have civil liberties and cannot go to court. Mr. Gingrich suggested that there were two levels of justice; civil and criminal defense are at one level, while acts of war are on another level. “It is an act of war and should be dealt with as an act of war and the correct thing in an act of war is to kill people who are trying to kill you.”

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: There is no constitutional justification for the idea that there are two “levels” of justice. The Fifth Amendment to the Constitution only suspends the requirement for an indictment by a grand jury in military cases, but does not suspend the right to due process in a court of law. There is a real danger to notions such as those offered here by Mr. Gingrich, if due process can be suspended for those deemed to be enemies of the state then the same argument can, and has, been used to justify assassinations of American citizens in the United States without due process of law.

VIII. Trade War with China

The Constitution of the United States grants both the president and Congress the joint authority to engage in foreign policy. However, the president is not authorized to enforce treaties without the ratification of Congress. Moreover, Congress has exclusive authority to tax international trade. The power to declare war is reserved solely to Congress. While the president is Commander in Chief of the armed forces, he does not have the authority to declare war or to engage in international conflicts without a declaration of war issued by Congress. Congress may raise and support armies, but no appropriation for that purpose shall be for a term longer than two years. According to Article 1, Section 8, Congress also has the sole power “To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions; and to provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining the Militia....” A war or conflict occurring without an act from Congress is unconstitutional. The Constitution provides no authority to provide foreign nations social welfare. The principles outlined in the Constitution favor a non-interventionist approach to foreign affairs.

Question #11: According to U.S. officials, China is using cyber-attacks to steal billions of dollars of intellectual property that is critical to this nation’s economic success. Are we, sir, engaged in financial warfare with China?

Texas Governor Rick Perry:

Mr. Perry said there were some people who are saying that the next century will be a Chinese century. He pointed out that there were similar statements made about Russia during the Reagan presidency. He said that China, like Russia, would end up on the ash heap of history if they did not change their virtues and build honesty.

Mr. Perry said the issue with cyber security will be one of the great issues of the next president and that he would call the private sector to work along with the government to pull all resources to fight cyber terror.

Constitutional Grade: A

Remarks: Cyber attacks from the Chinese government pose a serious threat to America’s economy and national security. This is a serious issue because China’s cyber attacks have risen to a level that constitutes a foreign act of aggression against the United States that could lead to a justifiable war.

Former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney:

Mr. Romney answered that China had an interest in trade and wants to relocate 20 million people each year from farms to cities. He pointed out that they want to have success in the global markets and they need access to our markets. He said he would condition China’s access to our markets on their ability to play by the rules. “They can’t hack into our computer systems and steal from our government. They can’t steal from corporations. They can’t take patents and designs, intellectual property, and duplicate them, counterfeit them and sell them around the world.” He said he would also hold them accountable for manipulating their currency. He criticized President Barack Obama for being soft on China and allowing them to be dishonest while expanding on their ability to steal information from our computer systems, our intellectual property, and from our military.

When asked by the moderator what he would do to make China do these things, he said he would identify them as a currency manipulator and bring an action against them before the World Trade Organization. He said such an action would allow the United States to selectively apply tariffs in areas we believe they are stealing from us. To those who are afraid this will start a trade war, Mr. Romney, pointed out that we are already in a trade war and American jobs are suffering as a result.

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: The Congress of the United States does not need to receive permission from the World Trade Organization to levy tariffs on China.

Former Utah Governor John Huntsman:

Mr. Huntsman suggested that things look different when you are on the ground in China. Mr. Huntsman disagreed with Mr. Romney that taking China to the W.T.O. for currency manipulation was a good idea. He said that a trade war with China would only hurt small business, exporters, and agriculture producers here in the United States. He said that America should instead reach out to its allies and constituencies within China, young people. He said there are 500 million Internet users in China and over 80 million bloggers who are bringing about change that will eventually take China down.

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: It is unclear how Huntsman intends to reach out to young people, and seems to tend toward interventionism to “take China down”. China’s plundering of military secrets and the theft and counterfeiting of intellectual property are certainly grounds for a declaration of war. It is not clear whether or not this sort of subversive intervention is constitutional, but Mr. Huntsman’s resolve is very weak with regard to China.

IX. Due Process

The Fifth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States provides that no person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation. Moreover, the Sixth Amendment to the Constitution provides that in all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to confront the witnesses against him, have an opportunity to obtain witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense. The Eighth Amendment provides that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted. The only right that is waived for a military tribunal in times of war is the right to an indictment by a grand jury.

Question #15: Within days of taking office, President Obama, by executive order, stopped the CIA from using classified enhanced interrogation techniques that are not waterboarding. There’s a presumption that every person at Gitmo, under the Obama administration, should go into civilian court, not military commission. And the Obama administration recently said that any future captors in the War on Terror would not go to Gitmo. Would you continue these policies? Why?

Businessman and Columnist Herman Cain:

Mr. Cain said that he would reverse all three policies. He would keep Guantanamo Bay open. He said that he would allow for the military to use enhanced interrogation techniques. “They are terrorists. Pampering terrorists isn’t something that we ought to do.”

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Guantanamo Bay is a facility where the United States government is engaged in illegal and unconstitutional detainment of individuals who have not been convicted of any crime. The individuals held there might be criminals, but they may not be deprived of life, liberty, or property until they have been proven guilty in a court of law.

Former Senator Rick Santorum:

Mr. Santorum said he agreed with Mr. Cain. He said it was essential to leave Guantanamo Bay open. He said that the United State needed to use all of its enhanced interrogation techniques. He said these methods had been proven to work and were crucial to the War on Terror. Moreover, he said using civilian courts is the worst idea he had ever heard because civilian courts are for those protected by the Constitution. He said enemy combatants are not protected by the Constitution. Mr. Santorum argued that the constitutional protections, and those contained in the Geneva Convention, only apply to American citizens and our allies, and not to foreign enemies.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: There is no constitutional justification for Mr. Santorum’s argument. The principles of the Constitution are intended to prevent the United States from depriving anyone of life, liberty, or property without due process. The United States by its very nature is bound to the ideals and convictions of the Constitution. There is no branch or activity of government that is above and beyond the limitations of the Constitution. Therefore the right to due process is to be applied as a matter of national and constitutional conviction, and not at the discretion of government. Moreover, if the Geneva Convention did not apply to how a nation treated an enemy, then the entire treaty would be striped of any meaning.

Texas Representative Ron Paul:

Congressman Paul said the situation was a mess because America has adopted a bad foreign policy. He criticized the government of the United States for pretending to be at war when no war has been declared; nevertheless, we have gone to war against a tactic (terrorism) and there are supposedly no limits to it. He said that as a result we have created monstrosities in which our government does things outside of the law and engages in things like allowing the president to decide who is assassinated. He pointed out that it is not just foreign threats but also that three American citizens have been assassinated. He said this was lawless and that American citizens should fear that someday we will be subject to those same courts. Mr. Paul warned that if we do not work within the context of the law it would turn out bad for everyone. “Now we can be assassinated by somebody that we don’t even like to run our medical care, and giving this power to the president to be the prosecutor, the executor, the judge and the jury. We better look at that carefully before you automatically endorse something like that.”

Constitutional Grade: A

Texas Governor Rick Perry:

Mr. Perry criticized Congressman Paul by arguing that our military personnel are confronted with an enemy that will use any means to kill them. If America cannot use any technique necessary to extract information to save the lives of those fighting in the military, it is a travesty. He said that while he did not support the use of torture, he did support the use of “enhanced interrogations.”

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: The standard that Mr. Perry applies is a utilitarian standard and is not a constitutional standard. This answer reflects a government that is ruled by emergency and not by the rule of law.

Congresswoman Michele Bachmann:

Mrs. Bachmann also criticized Congressman Paul by alleging that he opposed the order to kill Osama Bin Laden. She argued that the execution of Awlaki’s sixteen-year-old son was justified, because Awlaki was also killed.

Constitutional Grade: F

Texas Representative Ron Paul:

Congressman Paul responded by pointing out that Mrs. Bachmann was wrong because he has voted in favor of the authority to go after Osama Bin Laden. He said he was upset that it had taken so long, because the American military had been diverted. He pointed out that going after Osama Bin Laden is a much different issue than the issue of assassinating American citizens.

Moreover, Mr. Paul reminded the panel that, “over 300 individuals were tried in civilian courts here and were charged with terrorism here. Most of them are in jail. I don’t think we should give up so easily on our rule of law.”

Constitutional Grade: A

X. Economic Policy

The Constitution of the United States places the power over the federal budget for expenditures and debts solely on the Congress of the United States. The president has no legislative power and is bound to faithfully execute the laws passed by Congress. However, the president also has what is sometimes referred to as the power of persuasion found under Article 2, Section 3 of the United States Constitution. He may recommend that Congress consider certain measures that he judges to be necessary and expedient. In extraordinary circumstances, he may convene Congress for a special session. Congress has a limited number of powers, under Article 1, Section 8 that residually effect industry and national economy. First, Congress has the power over the federal purse through the taxing and spending clause. Second, Congress is granted the power to regulate interstate commerce between the states. Under the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the commerce power was unconstitutionally expanded to include intrastate commerce also, along with virtually any activity commercial or non-commercial that could be shown to remotely effect commerce. This unconstitutional expansion of power has been used by Congress to regulate areas previously unreachable by the federal power under the Constitution. The Constitution provides no authority to provide for social welfare or to spend money for an unconstitutional purpose.

Question #16: Federal spending and debt are not only our greatest economic problems; they're our largest national security problem. Yet the President and the Congress continue to spend and borrow at record levels. Just adjusting the spending on existing federal programs will not solve the problem. What federal functions will you eliminate or return to the states in order to balance our budget?

Former Massachusetts Governor Mitt Romney:

Mr. Romney pointed out that the current administration was spending about 25% of the economy at the federal level. Mr. Romney proposed that he would bring the cap down to 20% in his first term in office. He said that this would require eliminating a lot of programs that we like, but simply cannot afford. He said that he would begin by eliminating Obamacare, a savings of $95 billion. He said that he would also cut the Endowment for the Humanities, the Endowment for the Arts, and Public Broadcasting. He said these programs were not essential and we could no longer borrow money from China to pay for them.

Moreover, Mr. Romney said that he would return Medicaid over to the states and allow the states to govern it, a savings of $100 billion each year. Finally, he said he would attempt to make the government more productive by cutting personnel by 10%, and link the pay of government employees to the pay of those in the private sector.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Mr. Romney would make cuts to several unconstitutional programs, but would continue unconstitutional programs such as Medicare. Moreover, 20 percent of the GDP is much more than what is required in a constitutional government.

Former Utah Governor John Huntsman:

Mr. Huntsman said that our most significant national security threat is the national debt. He pointed out that the national debt is at 70 of America's GDP and was moving up, while Japan's debt is at 100 percent of their GDP, Greece's debt is at 170 percent of their GDP, and Italy's debt is at 120 percent. He suggested that the solution to America's debt problem was the Ryan Plan. Mr. Huntsman said that he would send Medicaid back to the states. He said he would move education closer to the states. He also said that some economic development functions should also be moved closer to the states.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: The Ryan Plan reflects Marxist notions of class warfare and the redistribution of wealth. Moreover, Mr. Huntsman suggests the unconstitutional continuance of unconstitutional programs such as Medicaid.

Former Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich:

Mr. Gingrich said that he believed that there were four interlocking national security problems; (1) The debt and deficit; (2) Energy; (3) Manufacturing; and (4) Science and Technology. He said that there should be an education program for those who were on unemployment so that no one receives money for doing nothing. He alleged that it would save money and enhance human capital. He suggested opening up offshore drilling so that gas prices can come down. In addition, the Charleston Port could be modernized with the royalties and create more jobs.

He pointed out that he had balanced the budget four consecutive years while he was in office. He said he would bring unemployment down to four percent.

Constitutional Grade: F

Remarks: Mr. Gingrich suggests that the problems that exist should be fixed by adding more government bureaucracy to the problem. To unemployment he wants to begin an education program. This is a classic example of attempting to fix an unconstitutional problem, by adding another unconstitutional problem.

Congresswoman Michele Bachmann:

Mrs. Bachmann pointed out that the government added $203 billion in debt in the month of October, but the last time the Republicans controlled the budget the government added $160 billion that year. She said that she would make cuts by taking a look at "The Great Society" introduced by Lyndon Baines Johnson. The Great Society has pushed us into a modern welfare state. She pointed out that China was growing and that they did not have food stamps or social security. The Chinese do not have to pay FDC. She would repeal The Great Society legislation.

Constitutional Grade: A

Question #19: There is a crisis in Europe over debt, particularly in Italy and in Greece. And there is the threat of contagion onto Wall Street and U.S. banks. How do you prevent the Euro crisis from becoming a problem in the United States?

Former Utah Governor John Huntsman:

Mr. Huntsman said that in Europe there were two problems. First, Europe is our second largest export market second only to Canada. He said that if the economic crisis spreads in Europe, they will buy less and Americans will lose jobs unless we find other markets. Second, the crisis will spread through the banking system to the point where it will hit us in the United States. When banks are too big to fail in this country, there will be trouble.

Constitutional Grade: C

Remarks: Mr. Huntsman does not answer the questions, but instead elaborated on the emergency. The worst policies in government are enacted during these types of emergencies. The Constitution was intended to safe guard against the types of crisis America is experiencing and to get the nation through hard times.

Texas Governor Rick Perry:

Mr. Perry pointed out that the French and Germans have the means to deal with the debt crisis in the Eurozone. He said that the Euro was established to compete with the American dollar, but now they are in trouble because of overspending.

Constitutional Grade: A

Remarks: Mr. Perry relates a constitutional position. The Constitution does not allow the United State to intervene in the European debt crisis.

ESPECIALLY WHEN IT SEEMS HE COULD'VE DONE MORE THAN TO USE IT TO CAMPAIGN OFF OF...

Obamoney and Huntsman can't win the GOP nomination: their platforms reflect the same ideas and approaches of Moderate Democrats. I would comment further on the Democrats' platforms, but I have seen no debate or appeals to the public. It is as if they have already lost the 2012 election and have no fresh ideas on how to fix our nation's problems.

Democrats have resigned to spin the wheels of Obama's bus in the rut of economic hell. Obama doesn't even have a platform!!

His "economic plan" is a dirty trick bag of stimulus.

Though not as large as the super bank bailouts, where the bank has held onto $1 trillion of taxpayer money without loaning or fixing their "MORTGAGE-CRISES-BANKER-SPURNED GAMBLING ADDICTION", they have arrested Geithner and Bernanke's ability to do anything to thwart a second market collapse. This is good for the stock market, but bad for Main Street. Not that anyone wanted the Geithner-Bernanke New World Order style banking system, when global markets have weighed heavily on top of our $14.5 trillion dollar growing deficit. The Obama-Biden debt financing to China can't continue; as China will not allow us to do so, as their market is strained by our lack of recovery.

The only thing Obama proposes is a cosmetic approach before the 2012 election:
MINI STIMULUS #1,#2,#3

#1 UNFUNDED unemployment checks/unemployment insurance extensions

#2 UNFUNDED infrastructure, which should be left up to states applying for grants

#3 UNFUNDED tax cuts for businesses to create jobs

= $1.5 trillion of UNFUNDED GOVERNMENT SPENDING interest included

WITH SUCKER BONUS - some people will be eligible to temporarily receive Social Security that are capable of working at least a part-time job

All the while Obama is facing impeachment over his lack of citizenry on 9-14 with the Hawaii Department of Health summoned to court to answer to the court as to why they could not produce ANY birth certificate on 8-8, when it took three years to get a court ordered subpoena in response to numerous lawsuits filed and corresponding FBI investigations, regarding pending corruption and criminal fraud charges.

I have heard Harry Reid speak twice on CSPAN since the “DEBT CEILING DEBACLE”, and he blames the Republicans and the Tea Party for what he calls “NO IDEAS” presented by his party: he cites “their obstructionism” and “they’re holding the American economy hostage”, and these are the only things that they can contribute on their part.

Yeah, I guess when Democrats only present more spending as “the Holy Grail” to job growth and economic restoration when there is no gold to back it, Democrats really only do the best job projecting the problems that they created onto the other parties by further obstructing and holding the economy hostage to their fiscal insanity.

I have not seen any different ideas Democrats have other than UNFUNDED GOVERNMENT SPENDING. When you don’t have the money, and spend it anyway, it is called STEALING. This is why I will refer to Democrats as Kleptocrats and Stupidcrats from now until 2012.

The leadership of the Democratic Party displays no palatable nominees for the Presidency with UNFUNDED GOVERNMENT SPENDING AS THEIR PLATFORM.

Their party has catered to 20% of voter base and alienated the majority of taxpayers, 65% of the emerging majority is attuned with the GOP and Tea Party.

Why taxpayers feel that the Democrats’ approach has not worked:
nearly half of the voter base that is not Republican or Tea Party have not paid in taxes regularly for the past 15-20 yrs., and

Obama’s “CONSTITUENTS” have increasingly demanded more w/o paying taxes:

1) food stamps

2) Medicaid/Medicare

3) cell phones

4) housing loans based on racial privilege without income or intelligence quotient

5) education funding, rather than earned scholarships for talent or scholastic achievement

When $.42 of the dollar goes to defense, you can’t have $.50 leveraged in public debt in the form of UNFUNDED GOVERNMENT SPENDING.

Obama borrowed nearly $9 trillion against gold to fund his 2010 budget and the 2011 budget that he never wrote, by expanding UNFUNDED GOVERNMENT SPENDING in the form of social programs and unemployment without job creation or revenue from cuts or reforms.

Obama has levied the debt of 20% of constituents on the back of 65% of taxpayers, to the point taxpayers are losing jobs from economic slowdown and causing those who would not be on food stamps to join the roll, adding to the burden.

Instead of attacking poverty, as was his pledge state-by-state, he has IMPOVERISHED the entire nation, trying to spend his way out of poverty, rather than working America out of it by jobs, revenues, and cuts.

America could never afford or wanted Obama’s agenda in 2008; Obama lied about it all, and his supporters see now that they were duped as well. We now see if for what it really is: a grand scheme of theft, LIKE GRAND THEFT LOTTO: where you pay in a little and cash in on the money you never had to earn or have to pay back.

Yesterday, 11/18/11 the BBA failed to pass with a 2/3 Majority. Congress has only agreed to enough cuts and budgeting to operate until 12/16/11.

WE HAVE HAD NO BUDGET AGREED TO IN 3 YEARS, AND SINCE 2006, AND RAISING THE DEBT CEILING TWICE, WE HAVE ACCRUED $10 TRILLION IN NEW DEBT, AT A RATE OF $1.7+ TRILLION IN INTEREST ON THE DEFICIT, AT A RATE THAT EXPANDS EVERY 5-6 MONTHS, WE PAY THAT AMOUNT OF INTEREST $1.7 TRILLION.

WE ALSO HIT $15 TRILLION THE OTHER DAY, AND WE CAN'T WAIT UNTIL WE GET THE NEXT PRESIDENT TO FIX THESE PROBLEMS!!!!

BOTTOM LINE, IT IS PISS POOR LEADERSHIP !!!

THIS IS OUT OF CONTROL; CONGRESS SHOULD BE JAILED FOR FRAUD AND MISAPPROPRIATION FOR UNETHICAL CONDUCT FOR FAILING TO HOLD OBAMA ACCOUNTABLE TO THE OATH OF OFFICE FOR 2008 ELECTION FRAUD AND GROSS MISAPPROPRIATION BY IMPEACHMENT, CRIMINAL TRIAL, AND IMPOSITION OF FINES.

(SO IF I HAD TO PICK WHO'S TURKEY THIS YEAR, IT WOULD DEFINITELY BE OBAMONEY!! GOBBLE GOBBLE, AND THAT IS BECAUSE HE HAS BEEN PURE MEDIA HYPE... "ELECT ME.... IT WILL COME." I FEEL LIKE I'M IN A FIELD OF DREAMS MOVIE, BUT FOR POLITICAL CANDIDATES!! HAI YEAH RIGHT~~~!)

It Can and Is Happening Here

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 7, 2011 AT 6:08PM

Less than two months ago I was the guest on a radio program out of Fairbanks Alaska called Patriot's Lament (click here to view the video). Two of the hosts were David Giessel and Joshua Bennett.

David and I had become good friends ever since we met at the recent Casey summit. Being a young anarcho-capitalist, we had him on Anarchast (click here to view). Living in Alaska, they had been very curious about my libertarian hideaway in southern Mexico (AcaCondos) and David had made plans to visit this December.

That was, until, the FBI with 30 strong wearing body armor and bearing machine guns raided Joshua's house a few days ago.

The following is Joshua's account of what happened the morning of December 6th under his blog post entitled, "It Won't Happen In America, Yeah Well It Just Did":

This morning while I was working on a bid for a job, my phone quit working. I tried it a few more times and then thought about it for a minute and then asked my wife, is your phone working?

It wasn't.

So I sat and waited.

Then they came.

I watched them scatter.

My wife came running down the stairs yelling, "Josh, there are a bunch of men surrounding our house and they have guns!!"

I have 8 children, all of them watching the scene unfold before their eyes. Dozens of agents wearing body armor and carrying machine guns, swarm around our house.

I think over my options, (there is only one, they kill kids) and I walk to the door, and yell loud enough for the thugs outside and my family inside to hear, "It's the FBI, don't be scared, just be quiet and sit down!" I open the door and am looking at Michael Anderson's wife. They have her in front of them, between us, and she is crying.

"How can I help you?"

"Mr. Bennett, we are here for Michael Anderson!"

"Do you have a warrant?"

They walk right in. My mind is screaming to demand to see the warrant, when I am told, "Mr. Bennett, we don't want any trouble, and I don't want to frighten your children." He's a little late for that. He ignores my request about the warrant, and proceeds to find and arrest Michael Anderson. I stand in my living room and watch the agents running around here to there. I look at one who is holding his rifle next to a car. He looks at me for a second, then moves behind the car and continues to watch. I look at my 6-year-old twin girls; they are scared to death. I hold my hands out far from my sides for "them" to see.

Michael is brought upstairs, his 4-year-old son is screaming at the agents, "Don't take my dad, don't take my dad!" I ask what he is being charged with, and am told he is being held as a witness. "You guys arrest your witnesses now?" I ask about the warrant again. But it's done. They go out the door. They put Mike in the car, and spend a few more minutes running around the house for some reason, guns in the open.

Now they are gone.

One of the twins asks me, "Poppa, why did they come here with guns?" I say they were scared. "Why poppa? Why are they scared of us, we don't hurt people, and we wouldn't hurt them".

I tell her they just wanted to come and get Mike, and it's ok because now they are gone. She says, "I know why they came and took Mr. Anderson, Poppa, because they know he didn't do anything wrong, and they don't want him to tell other people".

HA! Out of the mouths of babes. She is right, one agent could have come and actually served the warrant, and produced the same outcome. That must not be enough fun for them. I talked to my older sons...were they afraid? Yes. One said," Dad, there were guys running all over with guns, how could we not be?" I told them it's ok. I was too.

I hope they enjoyed terrorizing my family.

Thugs.

Criminals in costumes.

So, Joshua's house got raided by 30 well armed FBI thugs looking for Joshua's friend, Michael Anderson. There was no arrest warrant for Michael and he currently sits in jail charged with nothing as the Fairbanks Daily News-Miner explains. Anderson had previously been held for 8 months just for being mentioned in a conversation with some other men supposedly wanted for planning to kill Alaska State Troopers or court officials and was released until he was once again kidnapped on December 6th.

While we know nothing of Michael Anderson's involvement in any activities, having Joshua's house raided, terrifying his entire family, sadly, does not surprise us.

The police and all the endless government agencies in the US have all become increasingly militarized. The US Department of Education bought a number of shotguns earlier this year, leaving one news agency to question why the DoE needs shotguns. That question was soon answered when a similar home raid was conducted by a DoE SWAT team in California looking for a woman who was behind on her student loans.

Many are awakening to the fact that there will be no political solution for the sad state of affairs in the US. Voting is just the slave's suggestion box and many are finally realizing that it does not matter for which of the two political parties in the US you vote. They both do nothing but increase the size of government and its control over your life. As Gary Lloyd said, "When the government's boot is on your throat, whether it is a left boot or a right boot is of no consequence."

 VS. 	Voting	Actually doing something
Easy	✓	✗
Quick	✓	✗
Free	✓	✗
Absolves Responsibility	✓	✗
Fixes the Problem	✗	✓

Josh concluded his blog entry by stating, " I seriously think if I hear another person tell me "it can't happen here," I may sock him in the nose." Events like this are happening every single day in the US. No-knock raids are now just a part of everyday life in the Communo-Fascist Police State of America.

Josh wrote to us, "The more people that see we are already in 1930s Germany the better. Folks have got to wake up. Its time to get out while there is still time."

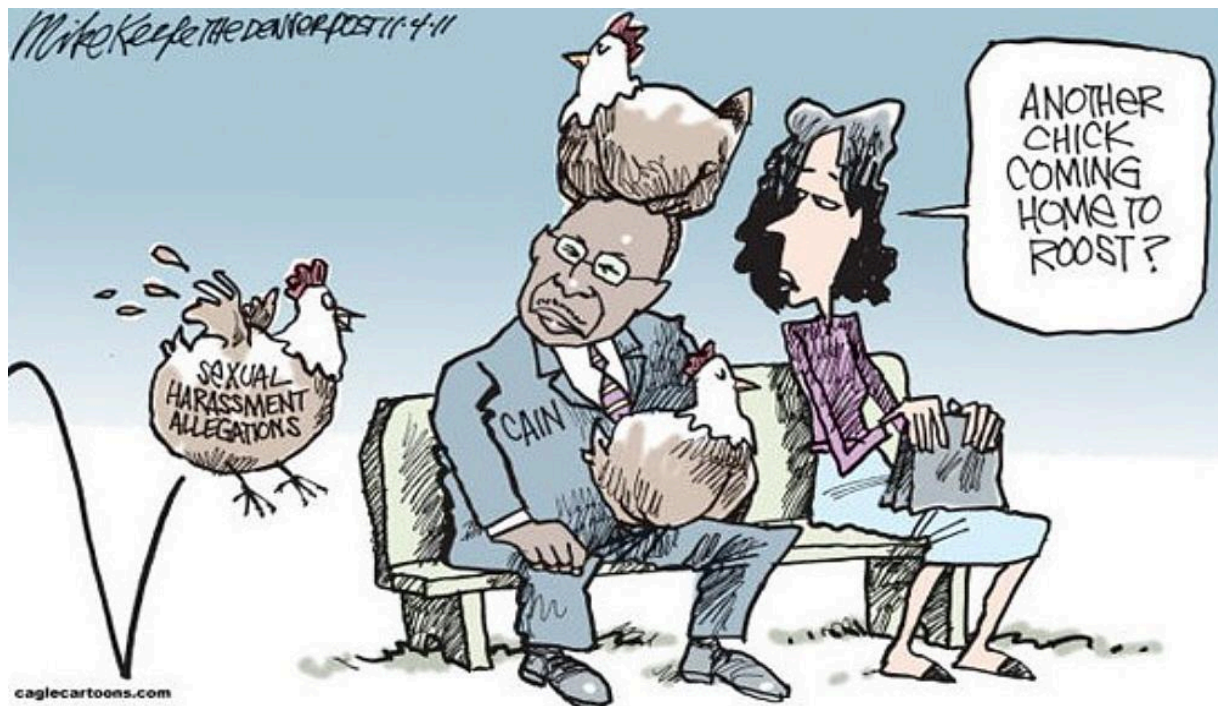

This is something we state very regularly here at TDV. And it is sad that yet another of our friends have become a victim to something that many sheeple still say "can't happen here". Not only can it, but it is "happening here".

Do you have to wait until it happens to you before you believe it?

What Herman Cain is guilty of: New Living Translation (©2007) II Timothy 3:6

They are the kind who work their way into people's homes and win the confidence of vulnerable women who are burdened with the guilt of sin and controlled by various desires. A lie detector would've cleared this up long ago, and I don't believe that he's 100% truthful on his marriage or 9-9-9; he should go on Dr. Phil and clear his name. I don't trust a man whose plan is 9-9-9=27% tax gimmick to pay for Obama's misappropriation. I also don't trust a person who openly lied to the Press about the allegations and what 9-9-9 really is:<http://www.facebook.com/photo.php?fbid=10150426688928670&set=a.79091778669.74391.773523669&type=1&theater>

Not really I used a calculator and researched it from Cain's site itself: it is 27% flat tax for all because, it kills small businesses. There is no deductions or charitable donations, so you can't write off a portion of your taxes as tithes, or 10%. Corporations pay 35% so this is a big break for them, they get the profit back that they've lost, even though they got out of payroll taxes, and Obama did that to bribe corporations for lobbying money and votes. Cain is doing the same thing Obama is doing, and worse, he is using 9-9-9 to pay for Obama's misappropriation, instead of addressing and fixing the current budget problems:

Aja Brooks We would be paying 27% to government and 10% to God, and if you do a basic application of this income to someone who makes $80-$1,000 a month as an individual, they will be left with $50-$100 in their pocket after tithe, taxes, and bills. Hardly what I would call 9-9-9 as fair, flat, or value added, but totally fooked up.

I do think Herman Cain is lying: he has destroyed himself by his lack of integrity and he is a Republicanized Obama according to his own policies. This is where he lied to the Press on CSPAN about the payout for sexual harassment, <http://www.facebook.com/photo.php?fbid=10150426688928670&set=a.79091778669.74391.773523669&type=1&theater> and he is a victim of his own vanity. He was done at Bialek, because he lied to God and everyone on CSPAN there was no payout, turned around in the same day and said: "Well, yeah... uh, but I didn't know what it was about..." because he was drunk at the time! Again, Herman Cainbeing a Baptist preacher, requires that he maintain sobriety and monogamous relationships for a reason, and he needs to come clean on Dr. Phil with a lie detector and publicly rededicate his marriage, before he gets slapped by his wife Tiger Woods' style or he gets served divorce papers. This was totally embarrassing to anyone's marriage, and Mrs. Cain is sick to stay with him, if he doesn't get help and marriage counseling. If the home fires are snuffed out now, Dr. Phil can do little to repair that, unless Cain COMES CLEAN, instead of being jeered as Spermin' Herman.

Bachmann is too 'go for the jugular' on Ahmedinejad and resources, and she blew that on "This Week" when Amanpour busted her on it, with the oh sh-t moment she had when Amampour asked her what would she do if they had a nuke. The very following week in response and defiance, Ahmedinejad tested something. Ahmedinejad is acting in fear. I like Paul's philosophy, but I am not sold on it as policy. GA GOP CORRUPTION, AND WHY WE DID NOT FORMALLY EMBRACE HERMAN CAIN OR NEWT GINGRICH:

BEWARE OF OLD HAT GOP TRICKS (Everhart sprung Cain because Nathan Deal did not support her re-election for chairperson and because Deal supported Newt for nomination): the GOP has a NEWTINY on their hands: Conservatives retract on Newt: #Amnesty #individualmandate #Fannie #marijuana #climatecults and Herman Cain derails the Cain train:

27% FLAT TAX FOR ALL?! I TITHE: NO 9-9-9! WE DON'T NEED A TAX GIMMICK TO LEGALIZE THE ROBBERY AND MISAPPROPRIATION OF OBAMA, SINCE 2006 DEMOCRATS CONTROLLING CONGRESS CAN'T ACCOUNT FOR $10 TRILLION OR WRITE A BUDGET IN NEARLY 3 YRS. !!!!

We don't want Newt, Old Hat Repub. bought and paid by lobbyist dollars, when he is not diplomatic on foreign policy, uses Conservative rhetoric while dipping his fat hand into lobbying hats that have destroyed jobs.

- Newt's laissez-faire immigration policy as Speaker cost the state of GA $20 million in immigration fees and 2-3% of tax revenue for the costs of services used by illegals, with GA having one of the highest burgeoning illegal immigrant populations.
- Newt also took donations for a hospital test piloting Obummercare computers/software that infringes upon privacy rights and
- took money from Fannie Mae Mortgage disaster, to keep the GOP off its back.
- Newt wants to further criminalize marijuana, in making laws more stringent costing taxpayers tons of money, as he hypocritically supports climate cults for cash on the heels of global warming scandals and fraud!!

HELL NO... WE'LL TAKE NEITHER NEWT OR CAIN!!!

THE CORRUPTION IN GA RUNS DEEP.... SO DEEP IN FACT, THAT DUMPING THE PEROXIDE OF AN ETHICS INVESTIGATION AND HAVING AN ELECTION FOR CHAIR REALLY DIDN'T RESOLVE THE GA GOP'S PROBLEMS.

WITH THE GA REDISTRICTING MAP RUFFLING THE FEATHERS OF THE OLD HAT GA GOP'ERS AND THE CAPITOL TEA FACTION, THOSE PREVIOUSLY REPORTED TO LAW ENFORCEMENT HAVE BEEN PLACED UNDERNEATH THE SAME PERSON WHO REFUSED TO WORK WITH HC GOP, FOR THE CORRUPTION REPORTED IN MAY 2011:

https://docs.google.com/document/d/1PREXKHVpl_c_RRWPJXABLz6oIvwtSY2B0ImVYx_Wic4/edit?hl=en_US

I AM ALSO TOLD THAT IN RETALIATION TO THE SOURCE LISTED IN THE PREVIOUS SYNTHESIS FEATURES THAT THOSE IMPLICATED IN TAX FAVORS AND BACKSCRATCHING FOR VOTES HAVE TRIED TO ISSUE AN AFFIDAVIT AGAINST SAHAR HEKMATI TO HAVE HER REMOVED....

TOO BAD; WHEN SAHAR TOLD ME IN MAY, I HAD ALREADY REPORTED THEM TO THE FBI:

SUE EVERHART HAS NOT SUPPORTED NATHAN DEAL. THIS SCHISM GOES BACK TO NATHAN DEAL NOT SUPPORTING HER RE-ELECTION FOR CHAIR IN FAVOR OF TRICIA PRIDEMORE, AS MANY OLD HAT GOP REPUBS AND CAPITOL TEA PARTY PEOPLE WERE REJECTING NATHAN DEAL'S POPULARITY AFTER HIS ELECTION, DESPITE KAREN HANDEL'S FAILURE TO FULFILL HER DUTIES AS SECRETARY OF STATE:

IT IS TIME WE CONFRONT THE CORRUPTION IN THE GA GOP, AND WHAT WE STILL DON'T WANT...

SUE EVERHART EVEN FIDDLER WITH PRIDEMORE'S HOTEL RESERVATIONS TO GET RE-ELECTED SO WE BOYCOTTED ATTENDING THE CONVENTION; THEN WE CEDED FINANCIALLY FROM THE GA GOP AFTER PRIDEMORE'S NARROW LOSS....

MEMORANDUM TO: Third Congressional District

From: Bill Simon, Political Vine

RE: My apologies

Sorry, Folks. You now have an official, slithering reptile representing you on the State Committee, and I possibly could have prevented it from getting voted on.

See, I did not find out until Friday that it was Sam Fleet who had called Mark Rountree and wrote Rountree to tell him to tell his employee Mike Seigle that the meeting of Sahar's group was cancelled (when it wasn't.)

You see, to call Sam Fleet a troublemaker is an understatement. She is so much of a liar that she claimed she was with Sahar's group, and sent an e-mail to the Henry County newspaper so they could print a cancellation notice, and she tried to prevent the speaker from getting to the meeting.

Fleet was "successful" in tamping-down attendance to that meeting. But, everything she did was pretty much sneaky, slimy, and so much befitting of the snake that she really is.

Sam Fleet is with the Republican Women of Henry County (aka Republican White Trash of Henry County), and works right in-hand with Vicki Temple. So, these two are pathological idiots. And, they will seek to cause as much trouble as they can, and wreak havoc on anyone who doesn't toe their line.

So, Third Congressional District Members, you have a sneaky, low-down liar representing you to the state committee. I know you're not happy with that. And, I apologize to you for not being able to notify you of the true Sam Fleet before you elected her to the state committee.

A "Proxy Straw Poll" In The 13th Congressional District

The 13th CD did not have a straw poll per se....but, they had something close. By a vote of 52 to 22, Sahar Heckmati stomped Allie Gelineau into the ground to become the chair of the 13th CD party.

Did you catch what we said? Sahar STOMPED Allie...this is significant because it was Allie who was the original instigator of all the hell launched against Sahar over the past two years by the Republican White Trash Republicans in Henry County.

To Sahar Hekmati and Sue Everhart:

It is not enough that Sue Everhart has "tried" to do something regarding the past issues of Clayton County with the misappropriation and breach of public trust under former Sheriff Victor Hill, or that she has "tried" to straighten out the mess of all of the money missing from the HC GOP. I do understand your frustration and hers, because during the last election cycle, Karen Handel did not make businesses pay 25% of tax revenue, even though we were in a budget shortfall. Instead of investigating various counties contributing to straining our entire state's budget, she resigned when former Governor Perdue confronted her about it, and she lost the party nomination to Governor Deal. She failed to do the job that we hired her to do by electing her to the Secretary of State's Office. A lot of people feel the same way about Sue Everhart, for the GOP Chairmanship. They attribute Karen Handel doing this for votes or as political favors.

This could go either way for Sue Everhart, she can cooperate and assist investigating agencies to resolve these issues and eradicate those exploiting the party for their own personal gain, or she can depend on the very ones that she is friends with on Facebook, like Karen Handel and others, to vote for her again. I do not think the taxpayers or the GA GOP will be so inclined to support Sue Everhart, if Sue Everhart does not investigate HC GOP for misappropriation and breach of public trust for the districts who obviously never received the money for the get-out-the-vote when it was divided up amongst 6-10 people and never put back into the HC GOP trust for the party.

As you allege here, that there is only $2,600 left in the bank with $50,000 missing/handwritten receipts, and no physical receipts from the offenders listed below in previous communications within the HCGOP to show what they actually spent the money on, since they divided that $50,000 six to ten ways between themselves and have not proven to us what they actually spent the money on, as it seems we are left with $2,600 to make posters and for advertising, which is very embarrassing for Henry County and reflects badly upon the GA GOP as a whole:

At any time, Sue Everhart could've contacted the following agencies to assist you both, as I have contacted them.

Your concerns were forwarded to the Governor's Office, the GGT&CFC <http://www.ethics.ga.gov>, and the Inspector General's Office.

I can also assure that appropriate news and law enforcement agencies have this information, in order to hold them accountable or for prosecution of possible criminal wrongdoing. You have done nothing wrong in telling me or showing me this information, but because of what is required to maintain my reputation as a lobbyist, I can't just sit on the information or write newsletters about it; it is my job to dutifully report it to those who have access to more information and authority over these matters.

You may also want to watch the WSB-TV2 news special today about businesses who got taxpayer money, in the form of loans or stimulus dollars that is GA's "Bridge to Nowhere". The Ethanol project failed, the funds were not used properly for it either, and no results were procured. Taxpayers look at this, and this is what they remember when they vote their local leaders into office.

Taxpayers want results, and that is why many people do not feel as loyal to Sue Everhart anymore, because she did not perform the job as Chairperson that she was elected to do, to hold HC GOP accountable, by reporting those misusing funds for get-out-the-vote. She will need to convince the taxpayers that she deserves re-election. Do not be inclined to support her in the wrong things because you are her campaign assistant.

The only reason that you have a job is because of taxpayers, and you should have a receptive attitude in wanting to resolve these issues or give me the email of Mr. Hicks.

All I can tell you is that the Tea Party is not endorsing anyone in Georgia. What I can tell you according to the Net News Network, Net News Poll, is that Herman Cain is way out and ahead as the favored Republican Presidential Candidate, well beyond Newt Gingrich. So, and in what I am hearing as a news company, is that the Tea Party is behind Herman, so whomever is GOP Chair, needs to be a Herman Cain supporter Aja Brooks hey I have thought long and hard about investigating these 40-50 GOP people that y'all have brought to me, and it came to me tonight how I will do it in "The Synthesis". To motivate everyone's BEST behavior, which we have not seen this week, I will give them a rating of some sort and how I back it up, like I quote the other source articles. Alright.. So let's see..

There was about 40K and 24 was or so was given to Charles to get the vote out.. Now the GOP in Henry has less then 2k.

Steve Davis found out about some funds that the state was giving to local Henry County to bid on.. He bid on it and took the money before anyone knew about it. He has a real estate company and he took 25k of county money and is not willing to give it back. He was not the only one, there was another Rep, but he returned it all back. I will send you the story..

His son run for District 5 school board, and was only 19 at the time, but called his opponent and made threats against him. The opponent was recording him and it was on the news. The report is filed with Henry County police. His son name Ryan Davis.

Mike Eddy, current Henry County GOP chairman, at the time the money was given to Charles 24K, was the finance Chair.

Now as the Chair he makes all the copies for the GOP on the expense of Henry County Public School because he is the Principle at an Elementary School here, during our executive meetings when I was the Secretary, he would make a joke and say, gift from Henry County School System. That is not right when teachers are only allowed certain amount of copies per day. It is all about dignity.

Allisande Gelineau is the current Chair for 13 District, she has started lots of things and has made a name for her self, but yet the story is, not sure if it is TRUE. She made it to Major in the Army, but never moved up, after 18 years, she left the Army and got into politics. Was aid to Davis clan..

Charles Mobley was past Chair of the Henry GOP

Sam Fleet, I don't know where she came from, but she is with them and now has a political consulting company called Tanner and Fleet I believe their on FB . And is making money from candidates running for office.

There is more, but for now.. this will do. I am sure their going to talk about me, but I will tell you all that there is to know about me. I have never taken a penny from anyone, I have never lied, stolen, nor do I plan on ever running for anything. I am known as the worker here.. If you hear anything, just ask..

give me a call when you have time, I can talk better on the phone..

Alright here is what I got from the tax commissioner.. Proof of the million dollars.. Keep it private.. we just now need proof on the rest.. I would hate to make claims on anyone without proof...

Sahar,

Tommy Smith started down this road on December 11th. I have answered every open records request he has asked for yet he has not called one time to ask questions or discuss any of the following information. Once Mr. Smith receives any information he then forwards it across the county without having any understanding of what he is talking about. I was asked by Larry Stanley to explain/defend my actions as Tax Commissioner and I have done so. Earlier this year, January 4th, I gave a presentation to the BOC

(http://henryga.granicus.com/ViewPublisher.php?view_id=2) explaining the good work we are doing. It has become a habit for Mr. Smith to insinuate someone is doing something wrong, yet never stating exactly what that something is. If Mr. Smith has any suggestions as to better collect the taxes for Henry County perhaps he would like to share them. I am always willing to listen.

Please read the below posting from the The Citizen newsletter. Afterwards take the time to watch the video. As always, I am dedicated to serving those who elected me and will be happy to answer any questions you may have.

Property Tax Waivers

On or about February 2, 2009, the Henry County Tax Commissioner attended a BOC meeting and asked them to approve a resolution delegating authority to him to make a final determinations regarding the wavier of assessed penalties and interest on unpaid Ad Valorem taxes. The Tax Commissioner stated to the Board that he had an old lady that could pay her taxes, but could not pay the interest and penalties for being late. He also stated that he had a bank that inherited some land through no fault of their own. He said that he really wanted to help them. The BOC approved Resolution 09-18 approving the Tax Commissioner's request.

Larry Stanley's comments to me (David Curry), Property tax record searches in Henry County available at <https://hcwebb.boca.co.henry.ga.us/webtip/Search.aspx>

The following queries were sent to Tax Commissioner David Curry:

I am in receipt of the spreadsheet provided to Tommy Smith. I do have a question about some of the 6,148 entries. In residential developments I see a lot of individual addresses under the name of the developer. Are these houses that have not sold yet? I also see some rather large amounts waived for the same developers. Please give me some kind of response as I plan to raise queries in the newsletter -- I would rather have your direct explanation to accompany the article. Thanks for your help in understanding this spreadsheet.

David Curry's Explanation

Mr. Curry's response:

On December 10, 2010, Tommy Smith sent an open records request letter to Henry County. The request sought information concerning all penalties and interest that had been waived since February 2, 2009 from this office, Henry County Tax Commissioner's office. I answered his request and sent the information on February 21, 2010. Before I begin I would like to give a little background. The authority to make the decision (O.C.G.A. 48-5-242) to waive penalties and/or interest is nothing new to Henry County nor is it different from most of the larger counties in Georgia. The past administration had an oral understanding it was okay to waive penalties and interest when he found it necessary. However, I did not feel comfortable making those financial decisions without having the support and written permission from the BOC. Therefore, on February 2, 2009 I stood before the Board of Commissioners, attendees, and the viewers of Channel 14 and asked for the authority to waive penalties and/or interest as I saw reasonably fit. Over the last 2 years there have been instances it was necessary to do so and I will explain in detail later in this e-mail. Since Mr. Smith received our response to his open records request there have been numerous e-mails sent back and forth and most of them reiterate my opinion, I believe Mr. Smith does not understand what he is reading. I want to address some of the language being used in the e-mails and some of the misconceptions.

First - Never, have I or this office waived taxes. Taxes cannot be waived. When taxes are due, it is the responsibility of this office to collect them. We use every available resource to do so (O.C.G.A. 48-5-234). When money was waived it was the penalty portion only and not the tax portion.

Second - Permission was given to waive penalty and interest. With that said I met with my leadership team and we discussed how we could help our taxpayers. I did not want to create a mindset that supported the idea of paying your taxes when you felt like it, however I vowed to help our taxpayers. We needed to have a plan to help while also promoted the idea everyone needed to pay their taxes on time. While penalties and interest may have been waived prior to me taking office I decided it was in the best interest to all not to waive the interest portion of the bill. The interest is 1% monthly, 12% annually.

Third – On February 2, 2009, one of the commissioner's asked how I would determine who would or would not receive a penalty waiver. To be honest, this question was not easy to answer then nor is it any easier today. We look at each case separately. With that said, there are those instances where we simply cannot by law charge a penalty. We tried to explain that in our response to Mr. Smith but apparently it fell on deaf ears.

Here are some of the reasons we cannot charge a penalty.

1. FDIC collections (FDIC 12 U.S.C. 1811, et seq., section 15 of FDIA (d) –

In 2009 we had a record number of local community banks fail in Henry County. When the FDIC came in, the assets were typically turned over to another bank, for example Regions, and the liabilities would be handled through the FDIC. As we all know 2009 was the worst year Henry County has experienced in a long time for builders and developers. Nearly every one of them lost their companies and the banks were forced to take back their inventory, land, and lots. Once the FDIC came in we were forced to play by their rules and not ours. Simply put the FDIC is the Federal Government and they do not pay penalties, only interest when secured by a lien.

2. Changes in Assessment from the Assessor's office –

If it is determined there has been a mistake made in the assessment of a piece of property, for example, the property owner was being assessed for having 4 bedrooms and there were only 3 or if a land owner was assessed as having 20 acres and he/she really only owned 15 acres we would re-bill the owner with a new due date. Since the penalty goes on the bill 90 days past the original bills due date we often find ourselves re-billing after the 90 day period with a new amount owed. It can sound a little confusing; however, it is neither fair nor legal for me to charge a penalty on a bill that is incorrect. Once the assessment is correct, a new bill is issued and the penalty is applied if not paid within 90 days.

3. Postmark of payment submitted –

We post payment according to the postmark. A lot of taxpayers wait until the last minute to pay their tax bills. As I mentioned in the above explanation, penalty is applied 90 days past due. If the postmark is on or before the due date and we receive it the next day we remove the penalty. At this point the taxpayer is paying the 1% interest each month the bill is not paid.

4. Certain Bankruptcy cases –

Under Bankruptcy court taxes are paid; however, depending on the type of bankruptcy filed we must get in line with the other creditors and wait our turn to be paid.

5. New Owner notification –

The Assessor's office must have a date in which they work off of; January 1 is the date. Often the current year's tax bill is sent to the owner on record as of January 1, 2010. By the time the tax bill is sent out in September the property may have been sold or foreclosed upon. If this is the case, once the assessor's receive the new address, we send out a new bill. Again, we cannot charge a penalty because the assessor's office does not have the new owner's address.

6. Appeal Resolutions –

It appears many of those selected in your e-mail were either paid by a bank or an appeal had been resolved. Once the appeal is resolved we must wait until the file is given to us from the assessor's office. Often these are property tax bills that have been taken to Superior court. This process is very lengthy and once resolved, if the appeal resolution pre-dates the application of the penalty, we remove the penalty, as it is not applicable. Again if the bill is not paid within 90 days, the penalty is automatically re-added to the bill. Mr. Stanley I hope I have addressed your questions. In this sample list roughly two-thirds were from the same developer. As you can see from my response I worked with Mr. Jones as well as Wachovia to collect $402, 837.63. We did however collect over $58,000 in interest on these 156 parcels. We stuck by what I said I was willing to do. Wachovia and Mr. Jones have been told not to expect the penalty to be waived in the future. I stated earlier in this e-mail, we have a plan to help those willing to help themselves. We are desperately trying to do just that. I will share some other information we learned last month. We are audited quite often and as of last month Henry County has the best collection rate of personal and delinquent taxes it has had in over 15 years. Our collection rate for 2009 is 96.50% for Personal property, 98.78% for Mobile homes, 97.22% for Real property. Our 2010 is also shaping up to follow 2009. I am very proud of the efforts made by this staff to collect delinquent taxes. I have placed explanations beside all of the entries. ( Spreadsheet sent to The Citizen) I truly hope this helps. This office has nothing to hide and has always offered an open door policy to anyone who has genuine questions and concerns. There is no "gatekeeper" here. If you have questions, I want you informed. I do find it disappointing that someone would ask for information from this office and not take the time to understand it or ask questions before sending it out to the masses. If anyone has any comments, questions, or concerns about this office or the information shared please do not hesitate to contact me. I am your Tax Commissioner and I am here to serve you.

The attachments appears to be a blanket certification that the Henry County Tax Commissioner waived the penalty and/or interest on unpaid property taxes on 6148 tracts in Henry County. Total waived amount $1,322,891.92. The list show the parcel number. You might be surprise of the owners and how many tracts of land they were issued waivers. Just my thoughts

Clayton police burn $12M in drugs

By Marcus K. Garner

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

9:15 p.m. Tuesday, January 12, 2010

Clayton County police burned more than $12 million worth of drugs that had accumulated in the departments crowded evidence room, authorities said.

Police received a court order from a Superior Court judge to allow them to burn nearly 10,000 pounds of marijuana, crystal meth and other assorted narcotics, Clayton County police spokeswoman Lt. Tina Daniel said.

"This is in response to the audit of the police department," Daniel said.

As part of a scathing indictment of former Police Chief Jeff Turner's management of the department, county Chief of Staff Alex Cohilas cited a narcotics evidence room that was "in shambles."

The burns happened on two different occasions, last week and Tuesday, in an undisclosed, secure location, Daniel said.

"This is just a small part of the police department's aggressive efforts to fight illegal drug use and sales in Clayton County," police chief Timothy Robinson said.

The burn was done with the aid of the Clayton Fire and Emergency Services, the Clayton County Sheriff's Office and the Clayton County District Attorney's Office.

The government does not care if aborted stem cells give you autism or cancer, as long as they get their money back by turning you into a cash cow for insurance companies with chemotherapy treatments, which you may or may not survive. DMSO has been show to cure cancer, but because the government can't patent it and make money off of it, they'd rather see you pay up and die from chemo! Perry Could Rise in Iowa, Polling Data Shows

Tuesday, 06 Dec 2011 09:48 PM

By David A. Patten

- inShare

Texas Gov. Rick Perry, whom some pundits had written off as the GOP's nominee, may find a second coming in Iowa, if new poll data holds up.

As Mitt Romney's campaign has suffered a startling decline in recent weeks, only to see Newt Gingrich eclipse the former Massachusetts governor's front-runner status, the battle for the Iowa caucuses set for Jan. 3 has become a wide-open race.

New survey data prepared for the Perry campaign and shared by a source close within the campaign shows that the Texas governor may be poised to do much better in next month's Iowa caucuses than earlier polls predicted.

The survey by the Austin, Texas-based Baseline & Associates firm shows Perry firmly in third place with 13 percent — trailing Gingrich's 29 percent and Romney's 19 percent. The poll was conducted Dec. 3-4.

But the internal polling data shows that Perry's "strongly positive" rating has jumped 6 points since the firm's previous Iowa survey, just three weeks ago.

And, significantly, Perry's positive rating among likely Iowa caucus-goers is at a commanding 67 percent. And a stellar 71 percent view him positively after having seen one of his commercials.

Other numbers that suggest a potential rise: Perry stands at 78 percent positive among self-identified tea party members, according to the survey.

But he also enjoys strong support among Iowa's undecided voters, at 71 percent.

One of the poll's most interesting findings: 67 percent of respondents overall — and a whopping 75 percent who are leaning toward former House Speaker Gingrich — state that they still may change their minds. That finding suggests that, with just a few weeks to go before the caucuses, the Iowa electorate remains very fluid.

The Baseline findings may indicate that Perry's vigorous advertising in Iowa is helping his campaign break through the clutter.

Late last week, the Perry campaign announced it would spend $80,000 on new, more faith-based ads in Iowa to appeal to the state's evangelicals.

In the new ad, Perry says: "Some liberals say that faith is a sign of weakness. Well, they're wrong. I think we all need God's help. I'm Rick Perry, I'm not ashamed to talk about my faith, and I approve this message."

Another ad focuses on U.S. energy independence from foreign oil, and a third offers some self-deprecating humor over his iffy debate performances.

Perry's forces seem to have another ingredient important for electoral victory: money.

One pro-Perry Super PAC, Make Us Great Again, has spent $943,000 advertising on behalf of the Texas governor. It has devoted special attention to Iowa and South Carolina.

Perry also has invested heavily in an Iowa ground campaign, something the Gingrich campaign is playing catch-up with.

Another rival to Perry's claim on Iowa's rich evangelical vote is Minnesota Rep. Michele Bachmann. But her campaign has suffered a sharp decline in the polls as campaign fundraising has slowed.

The Case for Rick Perry (and why he deserves a second look from Conservatives)

Posted by Robbie Cooper at 11:34 am Add comments

So this post from William Jacobson at Legal Insurrection about The case for Rick Perry remains the same, where he wrote:

Prior to Rick Perry announcing he would run for President I brought on Katie Thompson to make the case for Perry. Katie now is a leader of Students for Perry, and I predict, a future mover and shaker in Republican circles.

Given all that has happened over the last several months, I reached out to Katie and wondered whether she would be interested in writing another post along the lines of "Why I still support Rick Perry."

And her response:

Governor Perry's positions have not changed. His record is unmatched. What works in Texas will work for America.

What more can I say?

Smart girl, indeed.

Not a single vote has been cast yet in a single primary or caucus. But the MFM and the Liberal establishment (yeah, I know...redundant) are trying their damndest to pick our candidate for us. Of course they want Romney (the most Liberal and least likely to repeal Obamacare [which he pretty much authored] or Gingrich (the most deeply flawed and easiest to attack). The last candidate they want running against Obama is the candidate who presents the sharpest contrast to Obama.

Gov. Rick Perry may not be the best debator. He may not be as seasoned and as slick of a politician as Romney and Gingrich (which is a good thing).

But let me make my case for "why Rick Perry (still)."

And the primary reason is that he is the best man running for the office. Again — not the most polished candidate, but the best man.

Above all else, Gov. Perry is a good and decent man. I've met him on numerous occasions. I've gone shooting with him. I've had a beer or two with the man. We've chatted about guns, running shoes, and shared warm stories about our wives. And regardless of what you think of his exceptionally consistent and Conservative beliefs, he's a damned-fine person and an unapologetically-proud American (see also: The Top 10 Reasons to Love Rick Perry).

Gov. Perry is the kind of man who marries his high school sweet heart and then stays loyal and true for the rest of his life. He's the kind of man who volunteers to serve his nation in the most selfless and honorable way possible (something Newt, Mitt, and Obama would never have given a second thought, mostly because they either think it beneath them or they are simply too cowardly and self-serving). He's the kind of man who openly embraces his faith:

And he is the most qualified man running for President (to include the SCOAMF that currently holds the job). While Gov. Perry has made some embarrassing gaffes during his campaign (which have gained much more mockery and attention from the MFM than the gaffes that Obama has made in the same time [Hawaii is in Asia, Kansas = Texas, expressing his heart-felt condolences for dead Palestinian terrorists, etc.]).

Governor Perry is the only candidate running who is serious about reducing the size of our national government (OK, so is Dr. Paul, but his isolationist foreign policy views and the fact that he's batshit crazy have reduced him to "not a serious candidate" status, regardless of how many polls his myopic minions stack). He's the only candidate who seriously wants to reduce the role of government in our lives.

I know I've said I support Newt Gingrich, but that's only if the case that it truly is a race between him and Romney, or Newt vs. Obama. I just wish enough Americans would look closer at Rick Perry's record of governance and then take a closer look at the man behind it. There's a reason that the MFM and Perry's political opponents have never dug up any dirt or scandalous skeletons in his closet...despite having spent decades and millions of dollars doing so. He's been fully vetted, and there simply isn't anything there for the Democrat's dirty machine to go after. And they sure can't go after his record (especially compared to that of Obama or any Democrat-led state).

Food Stamp Abuse Caught On Camera

Posted: 4:07 pm EDT May 2, 2011 Updated: 6:35 pm EDT May 2, 2011

ATLANTA -- A Channel 2 investigation exposed a blatant case of welfare abuse and it was all caught on surveillance cameras.

Cameras that usually catch shoplifters and robbers this time caught a man pillaging your tax dollars.

The video, obtained by Channel 2 consumer investigator Jim Strickland, shows two men wheeling up to a Food Depot grocery store checkout line with two brimming carts of food and a flatbed of soda. One of them pays with what looks like a credit card. But the receipt shows it was paid with a food stamp card. Total for the bill: $749.09.

Sherry Stover is the store cashier who brought the video to Strickland.

Strickland asked Stover as a taxpayer, what she thought when she saw the video.

"That burns my butt!" Stover told Strickland.

Stover brought Strickland a printout of everything the men bought. Some of the items include 43 cans of Pringles, 31 twelve-packs of soda, and 12 dozen eggs.

PDF: Receipt For Items Purchased With EBT Card

Stover told Strickland she recognized one of the men and has seen him make huge food purchases before. She said the man, Syed Mehboob, runs a convenience store less than a mile away.

A Channel 2 undercover producer caught Mehboob on hidden camera working behind the counter at a Coastal convenience store around the corner from the Food Depot. The undercover producer also bought several items on hidden camera that carried the Food Depot "Flavorite" label.

"They'll pull out a food stamp card, turn around and restock their shelves with it," Stover told Strickland.

Another source told Strickland after the two men checked out, they saw Mehboob pay cash to the food stamp client in the middle of the Food Depot parking lot.

With a copy of the store security video in hand, Strickland approached Mehboob in the convenience store parking lot.

"I've got video of you buying inventory for this store with a food stamp recipient," Strickland told Mehboob.

Mehboob told Strickland the other guy was a friend named Larry. He admitted to reselling Larry's food stamp purchase but did not admit any fault.

"He should be questioned, not me," Mehboob told Strickland.

"There are witnesses that say you paid him cash," said Strickland.

"I didn't pay him no cash," said Mehboob.

The Government Accountability Office said 50 cents on the dollar is the typical price when traffickers buy food stamps.

"Are you telling me what I have you doing with Larry is not welfare fraud?" Strickland asked Mehboob.

"It's not fraud or anything. I didn't pay him anything," Mehboob replied.

"Two people here need to go to jail," state Sen. John Albers told Strickland as he watched a copy of the store video. Albers has made a crackdown on entitlement fraud a legislative priority.

"The dollars that should be going to help those who most need it are obviously being fraudulently spent in this case," Albers told Strickland.

Albers said he will push the Department of Human Services to investigate.

ATLANTA, Ga. - It's a story certain to drive some taxpayers to drink: needy families using your tax dollars in Georgia liquor stores. The original idea is to give direct cash help for needy children to pay for necessities like food, medicine, or clothes. But I-Team reporter Randy Travis discovered there is no way to make sure the money is helping anyone.

The program replaced the old welfare system years ago. Now, a poor family must be carefully screened, show that they're seeking work, and prove that there are children in need. But, the supervision seems to end when the cash arrives.

AFGHANISTAN'S OPIUM FIELDS OF CORRUPTION:

Corruption and Warlordism: A critical review of Corruption situation in Afghanistan

Corruption has become part of a complex triad (corruption, opium economy and terrorism) where warlords, insurgents, factional leaders, corrupt officials and drug dealers are contributing to its sustenance.

By Abdul Basir Stanikzai

Similar to many South Asian and African Countries, Afghanistan is also a victim of corruption that is believed to be the most challenging and acute problem in addition to drugs and terrorism. It has posed a serious threat to the legitimacy of the state, trust of the public, process of development and democratization, and the effectiveness of foreign aid. The United Nations Special Representative for Afghanistan Mr. Kai Eide has highlighted on 28th August 2008 that:

“Corruption in Afghanistan is endemic; it hurts the poorest people disproportionately, pushes people away from the state and undermines our joint efforts to build peace, stability and progress for Afghanistan’s peoples”

In addition, latest survey by Integrity Watch Afghanistan (IWA) in 2006-2007 revealed that more than 50 percent of the household in 13 provinces have paid bribe in the last six months to the government officials to obtain certain services. In addition, other findings by the same source show that majority of the public (41%) perceives the justice sector as the most corrupt followed by security (20%), customs (15%) and municipalities (13%). Similarly, Corruption Perception Index of Transparency International (2005) ranks Afghanistan near the bottom of 150 countries worldwide.

Izzatullah Wasifi, the government of Afghanistan's anti-corruption chief had a criminal records in the US and was arrested at Caesars Palace on July 15, 1987, for selling 650 grams (23 ounces) of heroin. Prosecutors said the drugs were worth $2 million on the street. Wasifi served three years and eight months in prison.

The Associated Press, March 8, 2007

Corruption in Afghanistan was a taboo and untouchable dilemma right until the end of 2003 despite government’s commitment in series of international and national occasions to combat corruption. After the government became signatory to the United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNCAC), it established an Independent Administration of Anti-Corruption (GIAAC) in Dec 2003. GIAAC was mandated to develop a foundation for fight against corruption by establishing regional offices in the country, drafting anti-corruption law and policies, investigating corruption cases in the government institutions and soliciting support from the Police and Attorney General Office to arrest and prosecute corrupt officials.

However, soon after it started its activities and filed cases of embezzlement of millions of US dollars from the national treasury and international aid, GIAAC’s leadership was forced to soften its approach and do not touch warlords and big fishes. The President himself, according to the former head of GIAAC, Mr. Zabihullah Esmati, has intervened and exempted several high level corrupt officials. The exemption of 6 key government officials, through a Presidential Decree, accused for corruption and fraud in the 2003 Haj ceremony is one example of government's inability to implement law and dismantle safe heavens for corrupt perpetrators.

Similarly, days after the completion of his preliminarily findings of corruption and embezzlement by the prosecutors, the former Education Minister Mr. Qanooni (now speaker of the parliament) got a special exemption from the President to burn out his files in the General Administration against Corruption. Mr. Qanooni was accused for embezzling more than US$30 million in the procurement of furniture for the Ministry of Education and printing new books when he was the minister of education 2002-2003.

In addition, pardoning Marshal Qasim Fahim and Younus Qanooni for grabbing the land of innocent civilians in Sherpur of Kabul is another example that encouraged competition among other warlords such as Dostum and Karim Khalili to further surmount national and international funds and construct palaces in the same vicinity.

President Karzai expressed his concerns over coalition forces' ties with Warlords in an interview with Spiegel:

"We wanted to arrest a really terrible warlord, but we couldn't do it because he is being protected by a particular country. We found out that he was being paid $30,000 a month to stay on his good side. They even used his soldiers as guards ..." According to Der Spiegel he was indirectly referring to the German Forces in Badakhshan supporting Commander Nasir Mohammed.

Der Spiegel, February 5, 2008

This deliberate fostering of culture of impunity was based on political compromises as the President did not want to offend warlords and criminals by punishing the members of their syndicates. This approach of the government offered the most conducive medium for corrupt officials and culprits to get protected in the criminal networks and safe havens.

Criminal warlords, human rights violators, kidnappers, and notorious commanders who are currently in the state institutions or have their members of their networks actively working in key government positions further deepened this problem.

International and national experts highlight some subsidiary elements that have caused failure to the fight against corruption such as poor legislations, limited capacities, uncoordinated institutional arrangement, corrupt judiciary and corrupt law enforcement agencies. However, they tend to forget the most fundamental elements which are lack of political will and the presence of notorious warlords in the government machinery. They are the real causes for failure of anti-corruption efforts in the country.

Its roots reaches back to the legacy of the previous so called administration or vacuum of legitimacy as Mr. Venderall, the former European Envoy to Afghanistan, termed it. When the Taliban regime collapsed due to US bombardment, there was a massive delay between the installation of an illegitimate government under Rabbani and the Bonn accord and by then more than half of the country got back to the hands of former warlord, criminals and Jehadi commanders. These Warriors came to power and they fostered a culture of lawlessness, looting, corruption, nepotism, racism and land grabbing.

"The luxurious houses and buildings either belong to government staff or members of parliament...there is deceit, misuse and playing with this land"

Karzai told a meeting of village elders in Kabul.

Reuters, Nov.13, 2007

It is true that corruption is a treatable cancer but it requires a firm stand (political determination), committed leadership, strong legislations, public support, and a clear institutional set up. Furthermore, in order to enlist citizens' support, you need to showcase some examples by punishing the "untouchables" those who have stashed away millions of US dollars during their power and are still involved in organized crimes and criminal activities.

The former Attorney General Mr. Abdul Jabar Sabit was mandated by President Karzai to crack down corrupt officials in the government engine. However, when he would investigate some high level government officials, President Karzai himself would call the Attorney not to touch the mayor of Herat because Hazrat Mujadidi would get upset.

If Warlordism fuels corruption, terrorism, lawlessness, human rights violation and instability in the country then who is nurturing warlordism? The answer is: many of the international partners, coalition forces and donor community.

Empirical evidence shows that more 70 percent of the rented houses in the capital cities belong to former warlords, notorious commanders and factional leaders. The buildings in Sherpur, for instance, which were grabbed by force from the innocent civilians, are mostly possessed by Marshal Fahim, Karim Khalili, Rashid Dostum, Younis Qanooni, Anwar-ul-Haq Ahadi, Baba Jan and other criminals and leased by many private companies, donors, International NGOs and UN projects. These international partners have rented tens of expensive vehicles owned by these criminal gangs and pay thousands of US dollars to their owners.

BBC, Sep. 12, 2003: Miloon Kothari, appointed by the United Nations Commission on Human Rights to investigate abuses in Afghanistan, announced that various government ministers including Fahim and Education Minister Younis Qanooni were illegally occupying land and should be removed from their posts.

Sherpur Scandal | Buildings of Afghan Ministers and Warlords

Chicago Tribune, March 16, 2008: Instead of calling the fancy neighborhood in Kabul "Shirpur," which means "child of a lion," Afghans now call it "Shirchoor," which means "looted by lions." English speakers describe the architecture style as "narco-tecture."

Sherpur narco-mansion: Gap between rich and poor in Kabul

Similarly, the United States military base in Bagram Airbase have contracted out the supply of their food commodities and equipments to a notorious and ill-famous commander and head of northern militia General Baba Jan and so many other examples.

Corruption has become part of a complex triad (corruption, opium economy and terrorism) where warlords, insurgents, factional leaders, corrupt officials and drug dealers are contributing to its sustenance. This has resulted into unstable and unpredictable situation and ultimately to poverty and unemployment. Evidence shows that Chiefs of Police and key officials in the Ministry of Interior including the former Minister Mr. Zarar Muqbil and the Deputy Minister Mr. Daoud are deeply involved in the drug trafficking in return for huge bulk of money from the drug mafia.

Police receives 100 times more bribe to facilitate the trafficking than his/her government salary; hence, diverting his moral responsibilities of providing security and safety to the people.

The Afghanistan National Development Strategy (2008) analyzes that such a culture of lawlessness and immunity before rule of law and justice have resulted into a situation where foreign and domestic investors hardly put their money into this ravaged country which ultimately fosters poverty, unemployment and reduced economic growth.

The complex triad of Corruption, Terrorism and Opium Industry

With such a widespread presence in the government including parliament, cabinet, judiciary and other key official positions, warlords stand united against the interest of the Afghan people by sabotaging peace and security and fostering a culture of lawlessness. They have ensured their safety through protected networks, and safe heavens in the capital as well as in the provinces. Hence in order to dismantle these syndicates and protected network, the following measures are commendable to be taken into account.

1. To be more realistic, it is only a phobia that warlords might have power to destabilize the normal situation if they were to be punished. But the truth that public is not behind them, they rule by gun and money so if the international community truly and courageously joins hands with the Afghan government and seize both of them, they can simply get rid of these notorious elements.
2. In addition, a simple remedy to such anarchy would be to block the routes of supply of these criminal gangs by cancelling contracts, pulling out of their homes, and terminating the rental of their vehicles.
3. It is crucial to revitalize efforts for the implementation of Transitional Justice that ban and delegitimize the participation of warlords in the political process.
4. No more compromises as it is the only poisonous measure contributing to the increase of culture of impunity and increase violence.

5. Speed up the implementation of Disarming Programme (DIAG) while soliciting strong support from the coalition forces against every single warlord even those who are currently on the government posts.
6. The international community could contribute in the seizure of their money and property outside and inside the country.

Unless the international community and the Afghan government truthfully take the issue of warlordism seriously, they would have little chance of bringing peace and security or winning the war against terror and insurgency as warlordism and terrorism are indivisible concepts which are feeding each other.
