

Andrew Doyle

Andrew Doyle has been in the world of athletic training since 2005. He attended Indiana Wesleyan University for Athletic Training. Following his undergraduate education, he attended Western Michigan University and attained his master's degree. In 2017, Dr. Doyle earned his PhD at RMUoHP in Athletic Training. Since 2007, Dr. Doyle has been educating athletic trainers while maintaining a clinical practice. Currently, he is an adjunct professor at Trine University in the Doctor of Physical Therapy Program teaching evidence based practice and facilitates research. Dr. Doyle also works as a clinical athletic trainer at Parkview Hospital in Fort Wayne, IN and assists with the development of the Athletic Training Residency there. In addition to these duties, he is also the President and Director of Clinical Intervention at Elevate Wellness Solutions, LLC.

Previously, Dr. Doyle was a faculty member at University of Indianapolis in the Athletic Training Department in both the professional undergraduate and masters programs. Prior to UIndy, he spent ten years at Indiana Wesleyan University in Marion, Indiana where he was an Associate Athletic Trainer. While at IWU, he instructed clinical and didactic courses in the Professional Athletic Training Program, as well as the Post-Professional Masters of Science Athletic Training Program. He completed his Doctor of Philosophy Degree in Athletic Training at Rocky Mountain University of Health Professions. Dr. Doyle's past clinical experience has included providing care to tennis and basketball athletes, high school athletes, and semi professional athletes and weekend warriors. His research interests are in sport performance, therapeutic modalities, and manual interventions.

Dr. Doyle has been a reviewer for athletic training texts, the Journal of Athletic Training and Sports Health Care, the Journal of Athletic Training, and the Journal of Sports Rehabilitation. He enjoys participating in cycling, camping, cooking, and creative home construction activities with his wife, Jill, and two sons, Macalister and Marshall. When not teaching, researching, and spending time with family, Dr. Doyle enjoys serving his community and the great profession of athletic training!