

Nuclear Jobs, More Opportunities

In the UK, British Energy, the power utility recently bought by Electricite de France, has declared that it will extend the life of some power plants for another five years. Because the company administers eight power plants in the UK it appears that the move will secure around 1400 nuclear jobs. The UK does not seem the only country to count on nuclear power, Bahrain's Electricity and Water Affairs Minister has affirmed that his country is looking to build a nuclear power plant by 2017. Plans are on the board in Asia as well where it is forecasted that the count of nuclear power plants is set to double in less than 20 years.

At the beginning of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) board of governors conference in Vienna, Austria 2009, the director general Mohamed ElBaradei expressed that work still needs to be done to strengthen nuclear safety and security around the globe. He also told the meeting that provisions for the use of nuclear power continue to rise, with growth targets being raised in China and Russia. Asia remains the focus of growth in nuclear power and the ending of obstacles on India's nuclear trade should allow a stimulation of its planned expansion of nuclear power.

The colloquium also addressed issues such as the creation of multinational structures independent from the politics of the member states to make sure that all member states could easily get nuclear fuel and reactor technology, and, following a petition by Russia, a proposal for a low enriched uranium reserve to be used by member states was circulated. The recommendation submitted by the IAEA caters for assured export licences and covers all long-term costs.

Attractive earnings for nuclear jobs

Although some workers in the atomic sector still argue that they are undervalued and under-recognised for the work that they do, other realize, especially at senior level that the pay packages for nuclear jobs are very good compared with the other industries. Pay packages for a EH&S manager can reach £55,000 + pension and car allowance whilst a managing director can earn £150,000 + up to 50% bonus and enjoy a company car, pension, life insurance and private medical insurance.
