DIFFUSER 101

Aside from smelling all sorts of good, essential oils are also good for you. A aroma diffuser is the easiest and most common way to maximize on the benefits of essential oils through aromatherapy. Aromatherapy is the art of using highly-concentrated natural oils that are extracted from flowers, roots, leaves, bark and other parts of a plant to enhance or restore psychological and physical well-being.

When essential oils are inhaled, aromatic molecules are absorbed through the nasal membranes and travel directly into the limbic system in the brain. The limbic system controls emotions and memory and communicates directly with the hypothalamus, which regulates the autonomic nervous system (breathing, heart rhythm, secretion of hormones, and all other unconscious functions). DIY Lavender Oil Diffuser

Essential oils, aka aromatherapy is extremely beneficial in so many ways. I am a big fan of aromatherapy and use essential oils to help me feel better, relax and rejuvenate. Many of us have been using essential oils on daily basis for cosmetic purposes as well as aromatherapy around the house. Essential oils can promote the health of body, mind and spirit, help reduce stress.

They have an effect that dually promotes calming and energizing. Whether in the bathroom, living room or any other room it can be use it around the house as a cleaning agent, and to give you the feeling and benefits of a relaxation spa right in the confines of your own aroma diffuser home. Aromatherapy is the art of incorporating beautifully fragrant essential oils into our everyday lifestyle. My favorite ways to use essential oils around the home is to incorporate them into other functional products and needs. For example bringing them into my all-purpose cleaner, natural insects repellent, air freshener, laundry refresher, linen sprays and even my DIY candle. See Full Informations...
