Private Profile (Character & Universe)

[7] Rough Background: Mizuha's parent's high expectations for her led her to lie about all of her accomplishments, and she slowly lost the will to continue. She plans to commit suicide 2 days after the conclusion of the game, this was decided before she was taken there. The effort is too much. Mizuha's parents are lower upper class in their lake based town.

[8] Important Moments:

- Realizing she can't meet her parent's expectations.
- Realizing there is no end to her act, so she decides to die.

[9] Character Relationships:

- Her parents, who believe she is exactly what she says she is, "the best".
- Her teacher, he warned her once.

[10] Motives: All Mizuha ever wanted to do was meet her parents expectations, but that proved too much. She wants to finish the lie the way she started, the best, before disappearing so she doesn't have to bear the shame.

[11] Likes: Quiet places, Baggy sweaters, moderate to cool temperatures

[12] Dislikes: Strain, sexual advances (for now), nosy people

[13] Misc. Character Info: Mizuha planned to kill herself one week from the day she was kidnapped for the game. She carries a small journal in her hoodie pocket.

[14] Homeworld: Immense social pressure for youth to perform well in their schooling led to many suicides as they couldn't make the cut. To circumvent the issue no reports or transcripts are shown to anyone but the student and their teacher. Any and all sorts of rankings or placement, excluding hierarchical structures, are removed from the schools process. While social pressure regarding performance was significantly lowered by their efforts, expectations still arose from parents leading to an honor based system most families use to know their child's progress.

Private Profile (Backstory)

[15] Backstory: Mizuha's parents expect a lot from her, given their status. Like most parents they want Mizuha to be better than them. Because of that they are always hyper focused on her studies and affinity training. They did not start truly pushing for it until Mizuha reached high school. Whereupon she started a journal to track her progress.

Week 1: 9th grade

HELLO! Today is my first day writing in this journal so I'll just write down why this journal exists. My parents sat down with me and told me I need to focus more on my studies and developing my affinity so I can be as successful as them. Most of the things we did in middle school were easy! So I'm sure if I work hard and keep at it I can be the best in my whole school! All I need is to know I got the best possible score and I can tell my them I've got it under control. High school starts next week so I'll try my best!

Week 4: 9th grade

Over these last couple weeks I have been able to establish a routine to make sure I keep improving where it matters most. Each day I'll wake up and walk to school and work my hardest in class. Once class is done I'll head to the library to study for 2 hours, it is very peaceful there and I like how comfortable the chairs are. Once I finish up at the library I'll go to a secluded spot in the woods and use my affinity until I can't get anymore water out. I hadn't used it much till school started so the amount I can make is pretty small, but I heard the best users in the village took years to produce just 50 gallons worth. Doing that everyday is exhausting but I'm sure it will pay off eventually.

Week 10: 9th grade

It's been difficult to keep this journal running with all the practice I've had to put in. I haven't been able to get the perfect marks I wanted since the 4 week of school. I told my parents that I was still getting the best score so that when they go back up it will be as if I never dropped them. It has been really tough but I'll just have to keep going so I can get the best score next time. Someone asked me how I did on a test today and I didn't know what to do so I just laughed and blurted out, "I GOT THE HIGHEST SCORE POSSIBLE." The person who asked looked annoyed so I kept laughing and ran away. I had to make sure my story to my parents matched if they talked to anything.

Week 13: 9th grade

9th grade is finally coming to a close. I'm not that happy about it, but I had to keep telling that classmate and my parents I was getting the best scores. Despite how much I've been studying, it's been hard to get higher scores than an 80%. I'll just have to study and train all summer so I can make my words ring true.

Week 1: 10th grade

Back at it with school again. I worked hard over the summer so I hope it pays off this year. I was pretty depressed that I couldn't go have fun with people over the summer but it will all be worth it once I get those higher scores.

Week 6: 10th grade

It didn't work .

I can't believe it. My studying didn't work, at least, not as intended. I totally didn't expect to go back to the character I played for that one classmate, but now every student in the school knows about it. Instead of having to do all that for one person I have to do it for everyone. It is so tiring to pull off consistently. Luckily I discovered a good place to relieve that stress. If you follow the main road West out of town you'll find a gravel road that goes right past a beautiful small lake. You can sit underneath the trees scattered across the rolling plains surrounding it. I go there to study when I need a change of scenery, but I mostly just go there to rest.

Week 14: 10th grade

My grades aren't improving . In fact, they're getting worse. Every week I study and practice to no end, but every week they bring in new topics I can't even grasp the surface of. Funny enough the only class I actually get ok grades in is physics. That would be great if my affinity could do anything besides make a couple bowls of Ramen. Regardless of how well I do in physics they aren't nearly what I claim them to be. I came home from my lake spot today and my parents took me out to dinner. When we got our food I asked them what the occasion was and they replied, "We ate out today because we had something we wanted to say to you. You put in so much effort and did more than we ever asked of you. We are proud of you, Mizuha." I hugged them and bawled my eyes out. They hugged me back and cried as well, but for a different reason. I kept my face buried in their shoulder till I was done. I couldn't look them in the eye.

Week 3: 11th grade

Apparently after a full year of hearing me brag every single day about my grades someone became fed up with me. They challenged me to a contest to see whose affinity was stronger. If they chose a task I couldn't do I would be found out. It would waterfall to my grades and eventually to my parents. I couldn't let that happen. I had to take control of the situation. I forced the challenger to meet at my resting place near the lake and insisted that the contest be whoever could drop more water on the others head from above. The date was set for the next day, I lied and said I had already used my affinity to much today. I ran to Secretum's hardware store and grabbed a giant pack of plastic bags. I filled the bags with water from the lake and hoisted them up into the tree. They were super heavy but pulleys really do work huh? They were very visible if you just looked up but I would have to hope no one did that. The next day came and I got dressed in my affinity duel outfit, most people had a set because of the hope for strong affinities. I positioned myself so that they would approach and stand under the tree. Around ten students came to witness me being put down a peg. The challenger took the first move drenching me in cold water. Wet clothes suck. Shaking the water off my hands I looked at the challenger with a sly smug smirk. I teased him, "You thought you could beat ME? I'm not all talk, you know." With a quick execution I summoned water above him and fired a small icicle across the bottom of the plastic bags. He looked up towards the water as it cascaded down. I almost yelped when I thought he saw the plastic, but he must have missed it. The force of the water knocked the challenger over and he was left sputtering on the ground. The other students grumbled and left along with the loser while I laughed in their face and taunted their every move. Once they went over the hill I collapsed on the dry side of the tree. I got lucky.

Week 9: 11th grade

Her teacher after hearing about the duel warns her not to continue because what she is trying to do will only end with her hurting herself

Today my chemistry teacher asked me to stay after school

Week 4: 12th grade

After another two duels people have started avoiding Mizuha more heavily than before, the exhaustion builds

Week 11: 12th grade

Mizuha's grades have reached the point where she is barely passing but she can't stop the exhaustion builds

Week 17: 12th Grade

She shouldn't go to college with her grades but she has to for the lies continuation, she will not be able to pass college level courses, the exhaustion piques

Week 6: College Freshman

I received my last test's score today.

I FAILED.

How am I going to keep this up? Each week I get more and more exhausted. I work and work and work and work and work and work and WORK AnD WoRK AND WoRK AND NONE OF MY EFFORT EVER AMOUNTS TO WHAT I SAY. HOW AM I SUPPOSED TO BE THE BEST IF I CAN'T PASS A SIMPLE TEST. I STUDY AND TRAIN FOR HOURS EVERY. SINGLE. DAY. AND I NEVER IMPROVE. MY AFFINITY CAN'T EVEN FILL 3 POP BOTTLES! I can't tell my parents, I can't tell them, I can't tell them, I can not tell them. They wasted all this care and money on me. I am going to throw away what they gave me and IT'S ALL MY FAULT. This needs to end, this has to end, I can't tell them, they would hate me. "You've lied to us for years? What child are you? You barely passed highschool why should we pay for college?" All my peers already ignore me, they think I'm just some annoying rich brat who has all the talent in the world. They would just be happy if I went away.

Week 8: College Freshman

This will be my last journal entry. In two weeks, I will take my last test as a student. No one will care. I can't drop the act, then everyone would know what I am. I need to rest so I can make this final stretch. That spot by the tree and lake is the only reason I could make it this far. I'll have to apologize to them for tossing aside their hospitality. I CAN'T do it. I'm sorry.

[29] Weapons

Tier 1 Weapon (10 ATK)

Name: Master of Water Theatrics

Tier: 1

Description: A carefully set trap/plan that makes it appear Mizuha is doing extraordinary water magic, but she isn't. It is triggered and synergizes with her magic to not appear obvious. Tier 2 Weapon (8 ATK)

Name: Dreamy Steamy

Tier: 3

Description: Mizuha creates a crude icicle dagger from hand to hand combat.

Tier 4 Weapon (6 ATK)
