Draft:

I believe that with knowledge and motivation, you can achieve almost anything. I already have motivation, so my next big step is to get the best knowledge I can. I want to succeed in business, and to do that, I need the right education. My main goal at university is to gain broad and useful knowledge. I am applying to Rutgers Business School and plan to work in the business world after I graduate. However, just learning business isn't enough today. You need to understand different things to stay competitive. That's why I'm applying to the Honors College at Rutgers. By combining their interdisciplinary approach with my business studies, I'll have a better chance at success for several reasons.

The business world is unique, and you need the right mindset to succeed. It's not just about theory—you need to know how to use what you learn in real life, bring in new ideas, and solve social problems. The Honors College will help me understand how society works and how I can make a difference. Their approach will help me become a well-rounded student by connecting different subjects. It's a great environment for learning since I'll be able to talk more with professors and work with the smartest students. These connections are super important for someone going into business.

I've always been interested in tourism and care about the environment. I believe people need to take real action, not just talk, to help the planet. That's why I came up with the idea of an eco-friendly glamping resort. It will run on sustainable energy and won't harm nature. Instead, it will help people connect with it. If I join the Honors College, I'll be better prepared to make this idea a reality. I'll have more time to talk with professors and work with top students on my project.

Rutgers University offers a great education, but being part of the Honors College would make it even better. It will help me create a stronger plan for my business project, become a well-rounded person, and build connections with some of the smartest students.

Edited version:

I believe there are two key components to success in life: knowledge and motivation. With motivation as my driving force, my next major step is to acquire the best possible knowledge to prepare for success in the business world. To have a successful venture in this field, getting the right education is crucial. However, to be truly competitive, one must broaden their intellectual horizons and adopt an interdisciplinary approach. This is why I am applying to the Honors College at Rutgers University. By combining the multidisciplinary approach of the Honors College with my business studies, I will be well-equipped to succeed in the business world.

The business industry is dynamic. It demands both a theoretical and a practical approach for you to succeed. It requires an innovative mindset, an understanding of social issues, and the ability to apply your theoretical ideas to real life. The Honors College at Rutgers offers a comprehensive understanding of societal functions, enabling me to address social challenges through business. Its interdisciplinary approach will allow me to become a well-rounded student, integrating insights from various academic fields into my education. The honors college hosts some of the best minds from across the university, and I believe that being in this environment would be especially beneficial as it fosters healthy competition and helps forge connections, both of which are essential for a future in business.

I am particularly interested in the tourism sector of business and an advocate for environmental change. Businesses can and should be a force for a positive difference in our environment, which is why I have a developing vision for an eco-friendly glamping resort. The resort would operate entirely on renewable energy, minimizing the toll on the planet. This would also help people reconnect with nature, fostering greater environmental awareness. The Honors College would refine my vision for the project and show me the path to success. By offering opportunities to collaborate with the best professors and top students, I believe that I would have a much better understanding of how to bring my vision to life.

Studying at Rutgers University will provide a strong academic foundation, but being a part of the Honors College will significantly elevate my experience. It will help me develop a structured plan for my vision as well as shape me into a well-rounded individual. It will also allow me to build lasting connections with some of the smartest minds in the university. I am confident that I will be able to achieve my goals and contribute to a meaningful change in society.
