

The Little Light

The little light is light. Sometimes, that is all you need to take you far away. What matters is that it is light no matter how small it is. When there was no GPS, sea navigators used stars for directions. So, as long as there is light, there is hope. You may need to look through something to stay with the light. Whatever it takes, follow the light because it leads to life in abundance. What really matters is to find a little light.
