

Relief, Joy, Loss, Survival, community, sense of self, pride, belonging, celebration, mourning, faith, acceptance, hope, accomplished [use 1-5 to target your annotations] im back!

1. Who is the intended audience?

2. . What is the subject matter?

3. How does this reflect the themes of the Harlem Renaissance?

4. Questions You Have

5. Things that resonated with you

Zora Neal Hurston	Alain Locke
1. To her daughter, Janie D.W. 2. Attaining freedom is the subject matter and how freedom felt in different ways< AGREED T.Hollins 3. 4. Why did she write her novel as if she was uneducated even though she attended Howard University? D.W < I believe that she wrote like this be 1 this is how they spoke and how they were T.HOLLINS 5.	I feel that this was meant for a white audience thus why the vocab is more educated This is about black people and their roles in society in that time period The different changes that were 4.

R.A. and J.S.- the intended audience was her daughter, Janie

R.A. and J.S.- the subject matter was her talking to her daughter about having the ability to give her daughter a better life than she had.

I agree with the subject matter you guys put - K.H

R.A. and J.S.- this connects to the theme of Harlem Renaissance was the amount of opportunities allotted to the new generation

R.A. and J.S.- something that resonated with us: the way that people spoke and wrote

SJ and JB- 1). the intended audience is for black people who wants to hear the experiences of racism.

SJ and JB- 2). the subject is about racism and experiences.

SJ and JB- 3). black people in communities had to survive all the racism and also lost many things.

SJ and JB- 5). black people suffering racism

DJ- The intended audience seems like whoever is willing to listen.

The subject matter is her life, and what she endures throughout her life.

This emphasizes the way Harlem life is, and how it shapes the way people in Harlem are.

I really liked the quote "His shadow, so to speak, has been more real to him than his personality." I think it really shows this idea, that's often reflected in the H.R. that African-Americans have in a way been poisoned to think negatively about themselves - in this sort of internalized racism that makes it hard to understand and have a true and strong sense of self / pride in self, etc. --JG

The Audience was intended to be i think anyone for pure entertainment

The subject matter seems to be a young girl trying to find herself.i think this reflects the themes of harlem because janie is finding her way like they did in the harlem renaissance. KC

The audience is supposed to be Janie. Or anybody wanting to know her perspective about the Harlem Renaissance.

The subject matter is about a woman reflecting on her life.

A theme it reflected was hope.

Something that resonated with me is she just started to have civil conversation with a stranger on the street. - T.Hodge