

Mutual Aid Projects

A Humanist Approach to Community Care, Not Charity

What It Is

Mutual aid is the radical, time-tested idea that we take care of each other — not because we're saints or saviors, but because we're all in this together. Unlike traditional charity, mutual aid is horizontal, reciprocal, and community-led.

This model aligns beautifully with humanist values: dignity, compassion, autonomy, and justice — all without supernatural strings attached.

How to Start a Mutual Aid Project

1. Identify Local Needs

Talk with community members. What's missing? What are people struggling with? Common mutual aid needs include:

- Rides to appointments or events
 - Grocery runs or meal trains
 - Help with snow shoveling, moving, or childcare
 - Phone trees to check in on isolated members
 - Emergency micro-grants or bill pooling
-  Start small. The scale doesn't matter — the trust does.

2. Build a Volunteer Network

Create a shared spreadsheet, Signal/Discord group, or Google Form where people can:

- Offer specific help (rides, meals, supplies)
- Request assistance without shame
- Indicate availability or limitations

3. Match Offers with Needs

Designate a few point people to help with coordination. Or keep it fully horizontal and self-organizing — your group's capacity will shape the structure.

4. Host a Kickoff Event

Make it relational, not transactional! Invite folks to a potluck, community discussion, or service day.

 Use it to build trust, break isolation, and affirm shared values.

Promotion & Outreach Tips

- Use plain language and avoid jargon — “Need help?” > “Mutual aid opportunity.”
- Share updates regularly: “This month we covered groceries for 2 families + helped 3 elders with yardwork!”
- Normalize both giving and receiving — everyone's circumstances change
- Promote through social events, newsletters, tabling, and partnerships

Sample Blurb:

“We're building a Humanist Mutual Aid network to take care of each other in practical, no-strings-attached ways — from rides to groceries to a helping hand. Want to join us or need a little help? All are welcome.”

Tips for Sustaining the Project

- Rotate roles to prevent burnout
 - Share stories of impact (with permission)
 - Offer training or reflection spaces on boundaries, burnout, and power
 - Be flexible — the needs will change, and so will your capacity

Why It Works

Mutual aid taps into the best of who we are: not saviors, but neighbors. It meets material needs while building genuine community and trust. For secular folks often left out of traditional religious safety nets, this is the fabric of belonging.
