

Lynsay Webster is the Community Schools Coordinator for Union Endicott Central School District at Linnaeus W. West – Tiger Ventures. Now in her second year in this role, Lynsay is proud to support students, families and staff in building a strong and connected school community.

With over 15 years of experience working with children and families in the field of human services, Lynsay brings a wealth of knowledge and passion to her work. She first joined Broome-Tioga BOCES in 2020 as a clinician at West Learning Center in the Reclaim 6:1:1 program. After a short time in private practice, she returned in 2024, knowing that her heart belongs in the education system.

Lynsay is a Licensed Clinical Social Worker (LCSW) with both a bachelor's degree in Human Development and a master's degree in Social Work from Binghamton University. She also holds a New York State Social Work Certification.

In her role as a Community Schools Coordinator, Lynsay focuses on bringing the Six Pillars of Community Schools to life – bringing systems of support, expanding learning opportunities, strengthening family engagement, fostering collaborative leadership, connecting classroom instruction with the community, and creating a culture of belonging, safety and care.

Beyond her coordinator role, Lynsay is new member of the Broome-Tioga Regional Crisis Team, Broome County Suicide Awareness For Everyone (BC SAFE), and serves as a SAMSHA building champion for Community Schools and Union Endicott.
