Kidpower Vermont is a nonprofit safety education organization that might be a great resource for _____ [\[your school/group\]](#). Kidpower provides interactive child protection workshops for kids, families, parents, and professionals. These workshops are designed to be fun, not scary. Children and adults learn and practice positive relationship skills for everyday interactions and skills to prevent sexual abuse, abduction, and bullying. Adults learn and practice how to teach and continue developing these skills with young people.

I'd love to introduce you to Laura Slesar, Kidpower's director, so that you can connect and explore ways that Kidpower might be helpful to _____ [\[your school/group\]](#). Laura has led parent education evenings, professional development trainings, and student workshops for families, schools, and groups for 19 years.
