

DIZENGOPP PLACE - May 30, 1942,
Walter Zadek.

.... Anyone who doesn't draw conclusions from the fascists' policies has two choices: go along or allow themselves to be eliminated. But those who have been taught by European experiences have a third possibility: answer! Dor Go- violent people only understand one language: violence. We considered violence to be a means of communication among less "selected" peoples. Today, terror also seems to be the language of the Jews.

Don't take the gangster gangs too lightly! If these few had been destroyed back then, today millions of Jews would not perish on the battlefields and in bombed cities, and hundreds of thousands of Jews would not perish in self-dug mass graves. The atrocity at Dizengoffplats didn't need to happen either. We just had to take the instigators seriously in good time. Three weeks ago, during the first lecture by Arnold Zweig, the revisionist Cohen noted in the Tel-Aviv city council whether illegal means were a highly recommendable political argument against such events. Cohen was not brought before a disciplinary court once. That cost the blood of young Jews. Because his fellow members took it as a license and applied it to themselves. Right at the next one. Opportunity struck on sio. On won? To all Jews who do not swear by their slogans. Those of us who are still indifferent or remain silent are complicit in all the future declines. Anyone who stands by and waits idly will one day be beaten up, robbed of alcohol and driven out of the country by the Jewish fascists just as they were by non-Jewish ones before....
