 - Clarifies the type of accounts and makes the statement more precise.

 - Rewords for clarity and professionalism
 - “Keep up with current events” is more precise than “see what’s happening in the world”
3. “but other people say its bad because it can make you feel sad or left out when you see other peoples posts” → “However, others argue that it can have negative effects, such as making you feel sad or left out when viewing other people’s posts”
 - Adds contrastive transition (“However”)
 - Makes tone more formal and precise (“argue” instead of “say,” “negative effects” instead of “bad”)
4. “I think sometimes it can be fun but also distracting when you should be doing homework or talking to your family” → “In my opinion, social media can be enjoyable at times but also distracting when you should be doing homework or spending time with your family”
 - Makes the opinion more formal (“In my opinion”)
 - Improves clarity and flow (“spending time with your family” vs “talking to your family”)
5. “Some people spend hours scrolling and it can affect there sleep and there mood” → “Many people spend hours scrolling, which can affect their sleep and mood”
 - Refines phrasing and sentence structure
 - Corrects “there” → “their” (editing, see below)
 - Clarifies cause-and-effect with “which can affect”
