

Amy's Metaphor

After reading this article, I think the protagonist in the article is quite brave. Instead of escaping something because of his Korean blood, he combines Korean and German music into a different kinds of music. Although the protagonist feels that she cannot do this task, in the end, because of her teacher's persuasion, she wrote the music composition. The attitude of the protagonist is worth learning. She do not want to give up easily, and she is willing to try different methods. In the end, she can achieve the result she wants. It also tells us that we can't give up halfway when we encounter things. In this story, I also learned that we could not blindly pursue a solution when we do things. things. Sometimes we look at it in a different way, and the result will be different.
