

Ethical Declaration, Originality and Conflict of Interest Statement

Article title: _____

Dear Author(s):

In compliance with the requirements for the publication of articles in the Tempus Psicológico Journal, authors are required to disclose, preferably as an author note within the manuscript, any potential conflicts of interest related to the research work. At the end of the article, a section entitled "Conflict of Interest" must be included, along with information related to the research project, including: project title, the entity or natural/legal person sponsoring the work, and the corresponding code or identifier.

According to APA standards, potential sources of bias include actions by authors related to salaries, honoraria, consulting fees, research grants, or any other benefit directly or indirectly associated with products or services studied in the research. Potential sources of bias also include authors holding copyrights and/or receiving royalties derived from a product or service used or addressed in the study, as well as labor, academic, commercial, or personal relationships with entities or individuals involved in the development of the study.

After reading the above policy of the Tempus Psicológico Journal, please select one of the following alternatives by marking an "X" in the corresponding option:
