Re: Student overdose and Narcan on-campus

In light of the recent overdose on-campus (April 2023), we once again are urging the university to take action to have Narcan readily available at all dorms. Throughout University history, many students have reported the desire and need for this public health resource to be readily available.

Narcan's singular purpose is to reverse an opioid overdose. With the rise in accidental opioid overdoses (e.g., fentanyl in other substances like cocaine, etc.), Narcan is an excellent tool to have readily available. There are no negative consequences to using Narcan if the user is not having an opioid overdose. FDA has recently made Narcan nasal spray available over the counter, reducing barriers for this institution to act, namely D.C. CODE ANN. § 7-404 (immunity; third-party prescriptions).

Other institutions have implemented Narcan to be available on campus for their students. Examples include Columbia University, Bridgewater State University, Ithaca College, University of Maryland, and many more. These universities and colleges have instituted Narcan programs through residence halls and personal dissemination to students coupled with the trainings available on campus. Trainings, while necessary, are no longer sufficient to address the overdose crisis that can harm students. Narcan's availability and accessibility is necessary to address and ameliorate overdoses as they may occur on campus.

To wait to implement Narcan at AU is unethical and deadly. Students will continue to use substances during college, and it is in the interest of their health to prepare for action. As members of the University, past and present, we are incredibly disappointed in the lack of action to prepare for this incident, particularly given the major push from students over the past 5 years for Narcan to be available.

Thank you for your review. Act now.
