Below, a short summary about what is UX/UI Design and who are The New York Code + Design Academy.

Do you know what UX/UI Design stands for?

While UI Design stands for User Interface Design, UX Design means User Experience Design. Where UX Design has more analytical and technologic responsibilities, UI Design has visually ones; it has some similarities with graphic design. In other words, the User Interface Design is the series of screens, pages and visual elements such as buttons and icons used by the users to interact with a device. User Experience Design develops better interaction between a user and all facets of a company. UX Design also is responsible for researching, testing, developing, contenting, and prototyping.

Who are The New York Code + Design Academy ?

 The New York Code + Design Academy (NYCDA) is a tech school located in New York, Amsterdam, Seattle, Atlanta, Raleigh, Austin, Salt Lake City, and Washington, D.C. They offer full-time and part-time classes in web and mobile app development for both beginners and experienced developers.
NYCDA is compound by a community of entrepreneurs, developers and educators. They strongly incentive their students to work in groups to develop big ideas. NYCDA is open 24/7. The idea is always have an available place to code. This school also assist their alumni in job placement, interviewing, and networking.

" I found NYCDA when I was finally ready to transition from bartending to a day job. The technical knowledge I gained in this program was the perfect complement to my prior skills, and opened the doors to a career I couldn't have even imagined 12 weeks prior."

Bridget McMillan / February 2016 Cohort Graduate
