

The sheet music is annotated with four bars of instrumental dedicated to a lute.
Given the nature of the music, it is a heavily folk-based song. A homage to one's heritage as a Kul Tiran, yet this one holds something of an uplifting, rallying cry within it; a command that only the song of Arathor could hold. After four bars of introduction, the song begins as follows:

When a humble bard,
Graced a ride-along,
With James, The Grilver
Along came this song...

From when our hero fought
A silver-tongued leader
His army of rebels
At his boots did they revel

Guards came after me,
With masterful deceit,
Accused my lute
And they threatened the noose,
While the cudgel's beat
Minced their tender meat
And so roared the Grilver
He won't be beat!

Paint it red for the people,
O' Riotous cruelty,
O' Riotous cruelty,
Ooooh! (Elongated)
Paint it red for the riot,
O'Riotous cruelty---! (Elongated)

(The Chorus changes in the second loop, so the notation would state)

A minor instrumental takes place here, changing the tempo of the song.

At the edge of old town,
Fight the tyrant guard,
That bashes and breaks you,
And brings you gallows,

He marched the rabble,
Far on through the streets,
Deep in the cobbled tunnel,
The battle commenced!

He broke down their ranks
Got smouldered by their flames
He's a friend of your liberty
So let him go free!

That's my epic tale
A champion prevailed
Defeated the villain
Yet shackled he was!

This segment is indicated to be one that should be rabble-rousing and used to motivate a tavern into singing along with them.

Sing a song for your Grilver,
O' Riotous cruelty,
O' Riotous cruelty,
Ooooooh! (Elongated)
Sing a song for your Grilver,
And let him be freeeed! (Elongated!)

Sing a song for your Grilver
O' Riotous cruelty,
O' Riotous cruelty,
Ooooooh! (Elongated)
And let him be freeeed! (Elongated!)

Sing a song for your Grilver,
O' Riotous cruelty,
O' Riotous cruelty,
Ooooooh! (Elongated)
Sing a song for your Grilver,
And let him be freeeed! (Elongated!)

An instrumental of two bars concludes the song, played on the lute with optional accompaniment.

A footnote by the composer, 'The Rose of Boralus': "James "Grilver" Cousland is an unconventional, boisterous fellow, and yet I have seldom seen a man with more passion for the hearts and minds of the people than he. A man of action and practicality, ready to do what he believes to be right no matter what. That makes a hero out of a man, recognition is so seldom given to him as he now lies ridiculed in a cell for trying to put an end to corruption the only way he knew how... I simply wonder if such passion would be better placed when tempered with keen-minded strategy. He is a man deserving of his freedom, for if we shackle those who fight against evil, we are no better than the evil we claim to face."

The sheet music for the song sells for 50 copper.

(OOC NOTE: I claim no ownership over the lyrics this adaption is based on. All credits go to The Witcher's 'Toss a coin to your Witcher' and this edit for RP will be taken down if ever requested. Hope you enjoy it!)

Original song link: [Toss A Coin To Your Witcher \(Lyrics / Lyric Video\) \[Jaskier Song\] - YouTube](#)