

Organizational Analysis:

This analysis focuses on examining the structure, operations, and effectiveness of local community organizations, such as nonprofit organizations, community groups, and local businesses. It assesses factors such as mission, governance, leadership, resources, and impact on the community. By following these steps, you can conduct an initial analysis of organizations within the local community.

- 1) Define the Purpose: Clearly state the objectives and goals of the analysis.
- 2) Identify Key Organizations: Select the organizations within the local community that will be analyzed.
- 3) Gather Information: Collect relevant information about each organization, such as their mission, governance, leadership, programs, and community impact.
- 4) Assess Organizational Structure: Evaluate the structure of each organization, including decision-making processes, communication channels, and roles and responsibilities.
- 5) Evaluate Organizational Effectiveness: Assess the effectiveness of each organization in achieving its mission and goals.
- 6) Analyze Resources and Capacity: Examine the resources available to each organization and evaluate their capacity to deliver services and engage with the community.
- 7) Identify Strengths and Weaknesses: Determine the strengths and weaknesses of each organization based on the analysis.
- 8) Summarize Findings: Provide a summary of the key observations, strengths, weaknesses, and patterns identified in the analysis.