Regarding "SRS 216":

The code "SRS 216" likely refers to a cataloging or identification number used by the Shakespeare Recording Society (SRS) for their recordings or publications. While this specific code isn't detailed in the available sources, it's plausible that this edition of "Richard II" was used in conjunction with an SRS recording, and "SRS 216" identifies that particular recording or related material.

Recommendation:

To obtain precise bibliographical details or verify the association between this book edition and the Shakespeare Recording Society, consider consulting:

- Library Catalogs: Search for "Richard II" edited by G. B. Harrison in national or university library catalogs, which may provide detailed bibliographic records.
- Shakespeare Recording Society Archives: If accessible, these archives might offer insights into the "SRS 216" designation and its connection to this edition.
- Antiquarian Book Dealers: Specialized booksellers often have extensive knowledge of specific editions and their histories.

These avenues may help you confirm the edition's details and its relationship with the Shakespeare Recording Society.
