Dear [Mention the name of the recipient]

I'm sorry to have to let you know that I've made the decision to leave my job as a computer programmer in order to look for more fulfilling employment elsewhere. Within two weeks of the current date, this resignation must take effect.

I've come to the conclusion that my contributions are overlooked and unappreciated here. I feel disappointed because I frequently get passed over for unique initiatives despite having a lot to give. I must work for an organization that fosters innovation rather than stifles it. Even if you've been fairly compensated, you haven't been able to give me the other kinds of incentives I require.

That project served as a demonstration for me of the extent to which your mentoring increased my [descriptive] expertise, and we had a great time working on it. I'm thankful to have worked with you since the time you spent instructing and pushing me had a long-lasting effect on my career and development.

I haven't been here for anything, though. I've developed my talents and gained experience. Working with such a committed team has gained me their respect and appreciation.

I would want a glowing recommendation from you should any potential employers enquire about my credentials since you have stated that my work is exceptional. I would truly appreciate the chance to talk with you about any concerns you may have if you feel unable to grant this request.

Regards,
