

Worksheet 1: Vision On - Sound off

Name: _____

Did you see...?	Yes or No	Did you see...?	Yes or No
a rainbow		some clouds
Some mountains		some trees
a river		some balls
a teacup		some birds
a snake		some flowers
some bowls		some arrows
some elephants		some pigs
the moon		the stars

Worksheet 2: Vision On - Sound On

Name: _____

A kung Fu master is prepared to...

Train _____.

_____ fast.

Be _____.

And above all.... Be ready for _____.

But nothing can prepare him for his greatest _____ yet.

Who are you?

I am Li Shan. I'm _____ for my son.

You lost your _____?

Yes, many years ago.

I lost my _____.

I am very _____.

Thank you.

Well, _____ to you.

You too, I _____ you find your son.

And I hope you _____ your father.

Worksheet 3

Facts about Pandas: From Panda Facts for Kids website

<http://kids.sandiegozoo.org/animals/mammals/giant-panda>

Area:

China

Habitat:

Forests

Food:

Bamboo, grasses, bulbs, some insects and fruit

Size:

5 feet long

Babies:

Cubs are born hairless and with their eyes closed.

The Bamboo Bear (easy version - ChatGPT)

Pandas were a puzzle for scientists. They weren't sure if pandas were like bears or raccoons. But now we know pandas are bears, like their looks and how they move.

Pandas really like bamboo. They eat it for about 12 hours every day. Pandas use their five fingers and a special wristbone to hold bamboo. They use their teeth to eat the soft inside part and the leaves.

Baby pandas are very tiny when they are born. They look like a tiny piece of butter and have no hair. They can't do anything alone. Moms take care of baby pandas. They hold them and keep them close. For a few days after being born, moms don't leave home, not even for food or water!

The Bamboo Bear

<http://kids.sandiegozoo.org/animals/mammals/giant-panda>

For a long time, scientists weren't sure if giant pandas were bears or perhaps more closely related to raccoons. Now we know that giant pandas are indeed members of the bear family, similar to other bears in their general looks and the way they walk and climb.

Bamboo is the most important plant in a giant panda's life. They spend at least 12 hours each day eating bamboo. Pandas grasp bamboo stalks with their five fingers and a special wrist bone. They use their teeth to peel off the tough outer layers of the stalk to reveal the soft inner tissue. They also eat the leaves.

Giant pandas are only about the size of a stick of butter at birth, and they're hairless and helpless. The panda mother gives great care to her tiny cub, usually cradling it in one paw and holding it close to her chest. For several days after birth, the mother does not leave the den, not even to eat or drink!